NEBRASKA SPELLS "SPORTSMANSHIP"

The University of Nebraska is known and respected all over the nation for its red-attired fans, as well as its football teams.

Nebraska fans also have a nationwide reputation for good sportsmanship, at home and away.

"Big League"—that's the way Nebraska teams and fans have acquitted themselves in past seasons, and that's the same goal for 1983.

The University of Nebraska urges all 1983 fans to continue this fine tradition of sportsmanship by extending courtesy to the visiting teams and officials.

All of us on the Cornhusker Staff salute our fans as the greatest in the nation and thank you for your support and sportsmanship.

Yours for Nebraska,

Bob Devaney

Marching Red

NU Cornhusker Band

Dr. Robert Fought, Director

The Wisner-Pilger High School Marching Band, under the direction of Jim Johnson, will be sharing the halftime performance with the Cornhusker marching Band today. The Gator Marching Band has made numerous appearances across the country including the Orange Bowl Parade in Miami, Florida; the National J. C. Convention in Indianapolis, Indiana; Disneyland in Anaheim, California; Disney World in Orlando, Florida; and a halftime performance at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City, Missouri. In June of 1983, the band won first place in field competition and runner-up in concert and parade competition at the International Band Competition in Winnipeg, Canada.

Today's Game

Husker Offense Continues to Roll

Going into the 1983 season, most observers felt Nebraska had a chance to have a truly great offensive team, but after four games, the Huskers have surprised nearly everyone—except maybe themselves—with their prowess.

Nebraska led the nation in rushing offense, total offense and scoring offense last year, but in 1983, the Huskers are not only well ahead of last year's pace, but two of the averages are ahead of NCAA records. Nebraska is averaging 437.0 yards per game on the ground, behind Oklahoma's 1971 NCAA record of 472.4, but the Huskers' total offense mark of 617.7 yards per game is well ahead of the Sooners' 1971 mark of 566.5, and their 56.5-point scoring average is ahead of Army's 1944 record of 56.0. In addition, the Huskers are averaging 8.24 yards per offensive play, which leads Army's 1945 mark of 7.92 yards per play.

"I don't know that Nebraska will end up breaking any of these records, but I think it's remarkable that they're ahead of all three after four games," said Jim Van Valkenburg of the NCAA Statistics Service. "It's also significant that Oklahoma set its rushing records when it had its 'Wishbone Wizards' and no one really knew how to defense them yet, and Army set its records with a very good team against wartime opponents."

While the Huskers offense' has earned the plaudits of experts all over the country, the defense has steadily improved to where it suffers only in comparison to the offense's unusual excellence. A quick look at the stats shows that the Black Shirts are holding opponents to a meager 2.9 yards per rushing attempt, and have given up 721 yards in the air—two yards less than the Nebraska offense has gained, despite the fact the four opponents have thrown the ball exactly twice as many times as the Huskers (116 to 58). The Huskers are 14th in the nation in scoring defense at 12.2 points per game.

Seven new members of the Nebraska Football Hall of Fame will be inducted at halftime—former Peru State Coach Al Wheeler, former University of Omaha All-America tackle Jack Petersen, and five former Husker greats, Paul Amen, Willie Harper, Bob Mehring, Dave Rimington and Herm Rohrig. Ushers will also pass buckets at halftime for donations to the College Football Hall of Fame.

In addition, four present Huskers will be honored with special days by various groups—Irving Fryar by the North Platte Ambassadors, Turner Gill by the city of McCook, Nate Mason by the Professional Insurance Agents, and Dean Steinkuhler by the community of Burr.

NEBRASKA-SYRACUSE NOTES: Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne, who picked up his 100th career win with last week's 42-10 win over UCLA, could tie Bob Devaney's school record of 101 career coaching victories today . . . Osborne, at 100-24-2 for an .802 winning percentage in his 11 years at the Nebraska helm, is one of just 16 coaches in the history of college football to have an .800-plus winning percentage . . . One of the other 15 is Devaney, who was 136-30-7 (.806) in 16 years (Wyoming 1957-1961, Nebraska 1962-72), and they are the only two ever to be over .800 back-to-back at the same school . . . In his 11 years as the Husker head coach, Devaney was 101-20-2 for an .829 winning percentage, giving Nebraska a 201-44-4 (.815) record over the past 22 years, second only to Alabama's 204-39-3 (.835) over the same period . . . Today's game marks the 11th meeting between Nebraska and Syracuse, with the Orangemen leading, 6-4 . . . Syracuse won the most-recent meeting, 28-6, in 1961 behind 120 yards and two touchdowns by the late Ernie Davis, the Heisman Trophy winner that year . . . Bill "Thunder" Thornton had 133 yards and a touchdown for Nebraska that day . . . Except for a loss to Kansas by an identical score three weeks later, the Huskers haven't been beaten as badly at home since . . . Today's crowd will mark Nebraska's 127th consecutive sellout, a continuing NCAA record, as the Huskers will try to extend the nation's longest current Division I-A win string to 15 games.

That center on the corner...

Next time you are on the campus, drive, walk, or jog your way to 16th & "R". The construction activity you see is the Wick Alumni Center. It will soon be yours to relax in whether you are in for a game, a meeting, a seminar or what have you. The Wick Center will house all of the University's Lincoln Campus Alumni organizations, the central meeting place for all who those (and their legions are legion) volunteer their time and efforts for the University beyond Lincoln. The Wick Center will be used by the alumni of Nebraska, over 125,000 strong. And you run the Alumni Association — through the officers elected, by the projects you join in on, by the questions you raise, by the suggestions you make. Every great University grows and stays great to the degree that its alumni believe in it, keep in touch, keep it first rate. Not just by the money they raise (although money is on everyone's mind) but by the good word and good works they spread. Whether you are the Class of '33 or a brand new '83 model, keep the Alumni Association in mind. Keep the Wick Center on your itinerary, too. It will be your home on campus — and a beautiful one.

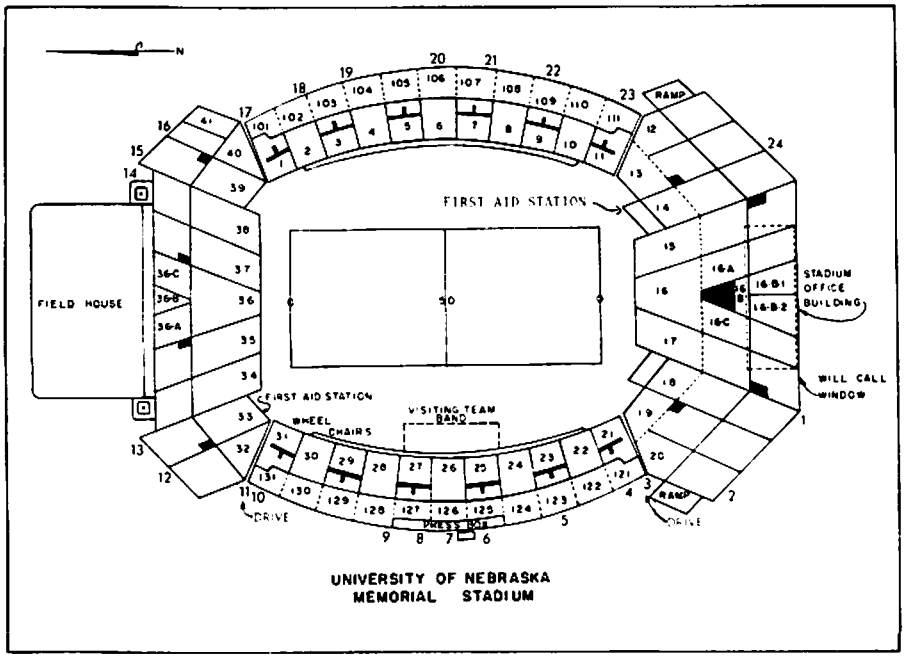

...will be YOURS.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln Alumni Association.

Join in — you will enjoy the work.

Chancellor's Club

The Chancellor's Club is a distinguished group which recognizes the importance of private gift support to the University of Nebraska–Lincoln. Membership is open to major donors.

Chancellor Martin Massengale

For many years, the University of Nebraska–Lincoln's support of agriculture through education, research and technical assistance, has helped our state become a national leader in both crop and livestock production.

Now, thanks to the impetus and support provided through the Governor's Office, the Chancellor's Club and the University of Nebraska Foundation, a new venture at UNL may open additional economic development opportunities for Nebraska as a major food processing center.

Our state is a natural site for additional development of the food processing industry. Nebraska's natural resources and record of agricultural knowledge are proven assets. Furthermore, the University's contribution of trained professionals offers a supply of quality leaders for the industry.

Private gifts are helping UNL establish the new Nebraska Center for Food Processing. The Center will bring together a core of food scientists, technologists, and market economists to help provide technical services to emerging and established industries, to identify market trends of interest to Nebraska food processors, and to aid in the development of new products and processes. Working in close cooperation with the State Department of Economic Development, the Center also promises to help Nebraska attract new industry.

We at UNL look forward to assisting in the growth and economic development of agriculture in Nebraska and we appreciate the support that has been given to the new Nebraska Center for Food Processing from major private donors.

PROTECTING THE PASSER

by Jim Poore, Idaho Statesman

They tend to lurk in the shadows, faceless players who either open the offensive spigot for faster, smaller and more famous teammates or toil in frustration when things aren't clicking. In either case, most coaches feel offensive linemen tend to be praised too faintly when things go right or damned too loudly when they go wrong.

One West Coast football coach, whose passing game the last few years has been a trend-setter in college football, knows what every other coach in the nation knows—if the offensive line hasn't got it together on game day, nobody else will.

"We sure emphasize it. We tell the rest of the guys they would have to pay to get into the game if it weren't for the offensive line," he said. "It's the press that doesn't emphasize it."

Quarterbacks who don't appreciate their offensive linemen are bound to live in agony at times.

"A quarterback has got to make sure the offensive line gets credit for any success he has," said one midwestern coach. "Those guys are the keys to his success, those are the guys that take all the punishment while the quarterback gets all the glory. If he doesn't appreciate them, that might affect them, make them ease up unconsciously. After he's been hit a couple of times, he'll learn to appreciate them."

Offensive linemen are just another in a long line of overlooked cogs in more complex issues. After all, who remembers the names of the men who held the horses for the James gang or the guys who sang backup for Elvis? But they were there. Maybe the names are shuffled while the stars remain static, but once the organization breaks down in mid-stream, even the biggest star—bank-robber, singer or college quarterback—is bound to have his act flounder.

That's why, with the passing game catching on everywhere, the pass-blocking efficiencies of offensive linemen everywhere—from Division 1-A national contenders to the most struggling Division III team—are being polished and scrutinized more than ever and why a good offensive lineman is suddenly as prized as a game-breaking tailback.

Being an offensive lineman may not be the most glamorous position, but a lot of coaches think it's one of the most difficult positions in football.

"I've always felt the two hardest positions to play in football are the secondary and the offensive line," said one coach. "You've got more things to learn. You may have to block one play six different ways. Every time the quarterback comes to the line of scrimmage and sets you, you've got a split second to make your decision."

In the past, offensive linemen might come from anywhere—an overloaded fullback corps, the defensive line or wherever there were players who couldn't quite make it and yet were too big and strong to be sitting on the bench. That's changing.

"You have an ideal player in your mind, but very seldom do you get that ideal," said a coach from the Far West. "You want a good athlete, but you're looking for the physical qualities plus the subjective things. Speed, quickness and size are part of being a good athlete but you also want an outstanding competitor with a good attitude, a guy who can really self-evaluate, the kind of guy who can improve, improve, improve."

Knute Rockne may have looked for the same qualities. So, what's the difference between today and the days when Ronald Reagan used to toil in anonymity on the offensive line at Eureka College in Illinois?

An offensive lineman has to have good feet when he's blocking so he can stay in front of the passer.

There are lots of differences. The plays—especially the passing plays—are getting more complicated all the time. Bigger, stronger, quicker and more sophisticated defensive players have dictated that the offense evolve as well.

An offensive lineman has to learn all his run assignments plus how to block for a myriad of passing plays—screens, dropbacks, sprintouts, short passes, long passes, fake passes. When an offensive coordinator comes up with something he thinks might work with the ball in the air, there has to be time for the quarterback and his receivers to interact. The offensive lineman has to be prepared to provide enough time so his quarterback can (a) have the time to set up and get the play off and (b) not have to worry about some 6-7, 280-pound defensive tackle chopping him in two every other down.

How is an offensive lineman supposed to go about doing this? It's not necessarily size that's the key, although many coaches fantasize about perfect sizes for the guards, tackles and centers that would have them wearing size 60 coats and size 32 pants. There are some awfully good offensive linemen in the 6-2, 235-pound range who can block 6-5, 260-pound defensive linemen with the ease of a tug managing the Queen Mary.

"The key is the feet. An offensive lineman has to have good feet so that when he's pass blocking he can stay in front of the guy," said one coach from the Northwest who installed a passing offense that turned his team from last to first in the space of one season. "In a passing situation, you don't have to have a guy who knocks somebody 10 feet off the ball. Talented feet and the ability to deliver a blow make the defensive lineman start his charge all over again. Size is okay if you have it. But you can get by easier with pass blocking than you can running the football."

Other coaches want their offensive linemen to cast Mount Everest-type shadows.

"The offensive linemen in our league are really big," said a West Coast coach who's made several trips to the Rose Bowl in the past few years. "Physical size helps a lineman; he's bigger and harder to get around."

What would be a perfect offensive line?

The tackles might be 6-7, 265 pounds and the tight end 6-4, 235. For some leagues those sizes will be bigger, for others smaller.

But squat-like or sequoia-like, the feet come into play again.

"You've got to have good feet," the West Coast coach said. "It's almost like chicken fighting; you're putting your hands on a guy trying to keep him away from your body. The defensive linemen are so big and strong these days, it's incredible."

A typical play for an offensive lineman might go like this.

The play is called in the huddle. As the lineman leaves the huddle for the line of scrimmage he's automatically thinking about what his job is on that particular play. Once he's at the line, the lineman has to recognize what defense the other team is in and who he's lined up against. Just when he thinks he's got everything in order, the quarterback might call an audible—changing the play if he sees a defense the called play won't work against—and the whole thought process has to start over again. The linemen have to talk to each other, asking for help or volunteering it in case the other team stunts. Once the ball is snapped and the quarterback drops back or sprints to either side to throw the ball, the offensive lineman has to stay with the player he's assigned to block until the last possible second.

All of this takes place in a matter of seconds and if anybody along the line can't maintain his block for the time needed to get the pass off, then the whole process is scuttled. When that happens, the quarterback is either sacked or he starts scrambling, trying to throw on the run. That's when the offensive lineman's errors are broadcast to the crowd. When the pass is successful, the eyes have been following the ball, long having left the area where the offensive linemen are just finishing their struggle to keep some gigantic defensive lineman from getting to the quarterback.

Those passing plays that captivate the crowd while the offensive linemen struggle in the trenches against the defense are varied. Some teams run a strictly dropback passing offense where the quarterback takes the snap and retreats directly behind the center. Others run play-action schemes where the quarterback fakes to a runner going into the line and rolls to the right or left to look for receivers running their patterns. Then again, there's passing off the option.

The assignments for various passing attacks differ.

Dropback: When the play calls for the quarterback to take the snap and retreat behind the center, staying in the protective pocket set up by his teammates, an offensive lineman must stay under control. The block is aggressive, but the lineman can't overextend himself and let the defensive player slip inside his block. In blocking for a dropback passing situation, the lineman has to block from the inside out. The feet should be parallel and the shoulders square. The second the ball is snapped, the offensive lineman should deliver a good blow to the chest of the defensive player and keep the arms extended within the width of the shoulders. Several years ago, the rules on holding were changed to allow offensive linemen to use their hands if they keep them within the width of the shoulders. Still, oftentimes that's not enough for eager defensive linemen who can't wait to crash the party. If an offensive lineman can't maintain absolute control of his opponent, he tries to run him outside of where the quarterback is setting up to pass. In dropback situations, an offensive linemen must be like a bodyguard for a famous movie star—he's got to keep himself between the fans and the star, no matter what the cost.

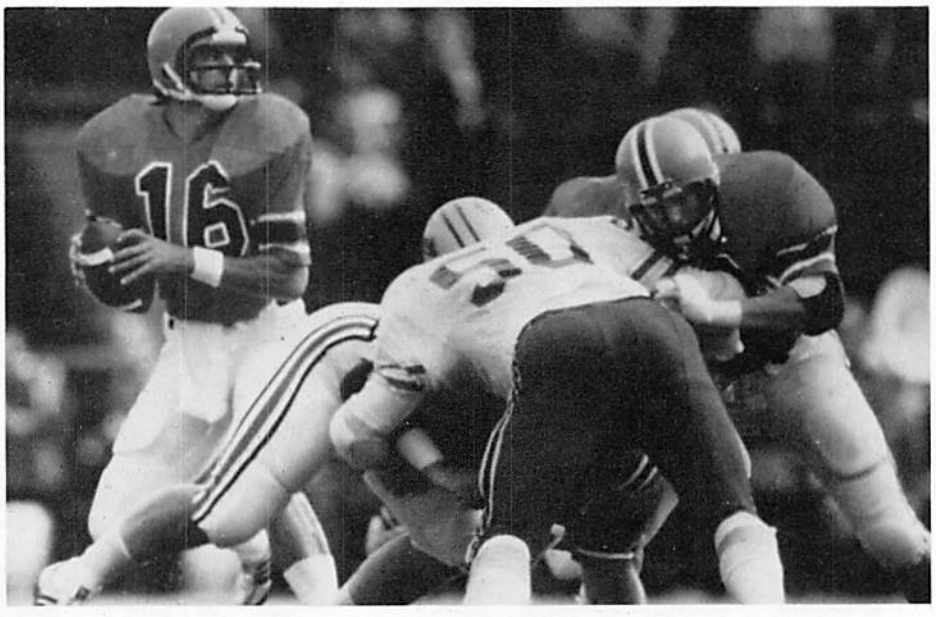

Quarterbacks who don't appreciate their offensive linemen may not get to deliver many passes this easily.

Sprintout: Here the linemen can be more aggressive in their blocking schemes. While there are always variations on how a lineman blocks different plays, the standard procedure on a sprintout is to fire out in a manner not unlike a running play. The lineman must maintain the contact, especially on the side of the center where the play is developing, because the quarterback is going to be going down the line of scrimmage. Penetration by a defensive lineman can easily kill the play so the offensive linemen must be aware of where the quarterback is at all times.

Screen Pass: On this play, the offensive lineman gives the defensive player a hit, holds for one count, and then lets the player slip by him in what appears to be a clear avenue to the quarterback. The lineman then gets out as wide as possible in the direction of the screen where he helps block for the receiver.

Teams that rely strictly on a dropback attack put the most pressure on offensive linemen.

"If you're a pure dropback team, that allows the defense to lay its ears back and come after you," said one midwestern coach. "The quarterback sets back there in the pocket and you've got to protect him for a certain amount of time. When the defensive line starts to mix up things with stunts, it's tough on the offensive linemen. They've got to switch off. If a team moves the quarterback around, it makes it tougher on the defensive lineman because they don't know where the guy is going to be."

The combination of quick feet and the ability to deliver a blow is considered a key to effective pass blocking.

THE INNOVATORS

by Jack Clary

"Pop" Warner introduced the single and double wing formations.

"No one ever invented anything!"

In those five simple words, spoken more than a half century ago when intercollegiate football was swinging along to the tune of the single and double wing formations, and the Notre Dame "Box" or shift, Jess Harper dismissed all of the claims made by some of college football's most hallowed names as to who really did what to establish the basic tools for what has become the American game of football.

And in so doing, Harper also dismissed himself, because as coach of Notre Dame back in the teens, he was given credit for developing the forward pass after successfully utilizing it with Knute Rockne and Gus Dorais.

Harper probably was being a bit harsh on such football pioneers as Amos Alonzo Stagg, Walter Camp, Percy Haughton, Glenn (Pop) Warner, Bob Zuppke, Rockne, and such later innovators as Wallace Wade and Clark Shaughnessy. This group, more than any other, really developed the tactics and techniques which we see every weekend on gridirons around the nation . . . and they did most of it when there were only 46 states in the Union and the Wright Brothers' idea of flying was still a concept whose time had not yet come.

It really is a bit startling to discover that so much of what we take for granted in this sport had its genesis among so few of the game's great immortals, most of whom were born more than a century ago. Some might consider this the first symptom of a sport gone moribund, but that really isn't the case. After all, there is only so much you can do with eleven men on each side, playing on a field that has distinct boundaries and under rules which are most precise as to how the game will be played.

It is what one does under those constraints that matters, and those old masters, once they divorced the sport from the rugby game, found all sorts of wonderful maneuvers that helped to develop football's current popularity. Each fall millions of people fill stadiums all over the country to watch . . . and wonder . . . and cheer. And while they're cheering, perhaps they—and today's coaches, as well—could spare an extra hip-hip-hooray for the following football innovators.

Amos Alonzo Stagg was part of our great-grandparents' past, but American college football would be extinct without him, and that includes today's game in which both teams are using the T-formation. Stagg invented it—and he did it nearly a century ago—in 1888—when rules changes brought linemen and backs closer together. Six years later his quarterbacks were taking direct snaps from the center as they do today.

Walter Camp introduced the use of signals to begin a play.

Stanford's Clark Shaughnessy perfected the T-formation.

Even before he established those T-formation mechanics, Stagg had installed the end-around play in 1891 while coaching at Springfield YMCA in Massachusetts (now Springfield College). Before the turn of the century, his offense included a delayed buck (1899) from the T-formation, allowing the QB to fake first to one back, then hand the ball to another. In 1903, his University of Chicago teams, led by quarterback Walter Eckersall, had a deadly quarterback keeper play, much like that used in the split-T of two decades ago and certainly the father of the keepers of today's Wishbone and Veer formations.

Stagg also was the first to establish the passing game as an integral part of an offense, following its legalization in 1906. His Chicago teams that year had a most sophisticated attack, including a replica of today's play-action sequences where a quarterback will first fake a run, then drop back and pass. That team also used the sprint-out pass, crossing patterns, the use of a single flanker, or split end, and the use of double flankers as are seen in the pro-set formations. Many of these were not popularized until the 1940s when, as we shall shortly see, Clark Shaughnessy revived Stagg's system and spruced it up.

However, a quarter-century after establishing the basic patterns for a passing attack—an offense that Harper helped to popularize while he had Rockne and Dorais at Notre Dame—Stagg tossed in the use of men in motion or "pedingers," as he called them, after the player on his Chicago team who became the first to peel off and run to either side of the field, before sprinting downfield to catch a pass.

Stagg didn't stop with the T-formation. He developed the onsides kick in 1894, then used a placekick for field goals in 1897, a feature that lay dormant for almost forty years, as dropkickers dominated the game until the early 1930s. Stagg also had a player who could center the ball with a spiral snap, and used this talent in 1899 to introduce the short punt formation, where a kicker stood about seven yards behind the quarterback. Prior to this, the ball was rolled backward on the ground from center to be kicked.

Shortly after the turn of the century, in 1904, he developed the first blocking sled, padded his goal posts to avoid injury to players in 1906 and was the first to turn his players out for spring practice in 1914.

In that same era were Walter Camp and Percy Haughton. The former is touted as the father of American football, but his most significant contribution was introducing, in 1882, the use of signals to begin a play. Haughton, like Stagg, was not wedded to the mass-power play system that Camp had popularized, and most believe that Haughton's greatest single achievement was wresting control of the Rules Committee from Camp in 1910 and helping to unleash the forward pass. The forward pass opened up the game and made it more appealing.

At the same time, the rules stipulated that the ball must be thrown five yards right or left, and five yards back of the spot where it was put into play. If the play was unsuccessful, a team was tagged with a 15-yard penalty. Haughton helped to change those rules with the addition of an extra, or fourth, down in which to make a first down. This meant added protection for the passer and the receiver (who could be hit while the ball was in flight) and, of course, no restrictions on passing distances.

Haughton, who was also Harvard's coach during this time, is credited with first using defensive signals, and, in 1904, with developing the trap play.

The wingback formations—single and double—were Pop Warner's creations and they dominated college football from their inception in 1908-1910 until the early 1940s when the T-formation came into vogue. And they're not dead yet since many teams use them as "shotgun" alignments on obvious third down passing situations.

The single wing, with one back flanked outside the end, was basically a power formation, utilizing a tailback who stood seven yards behind center to handle the ball. In its pure form, two tackles were set side-by-side and the heart of the offense ran through them. Warner popularized it when Jim Thorpe was his tailback at Carlisle and regularly beat up on the East's larger schools. Though power was its hallmark, Warner's agile mind instilled plenty of speed and deception, with reverses and passes as integral parts of his single wing offense.

When he went to Stanford in the 1920s, he used the double wing, flanking both halfbacks outside the ends. This offense was built on a hard-running fullback as the lone setback, abetted by a series of double and even triple reverses. When Warner brought his Stanford team to Yankee Stadium in 1928, he dazzled coaches and media alike with a devastating offense built on these principles, and soon the double wing had its circle of disciples.

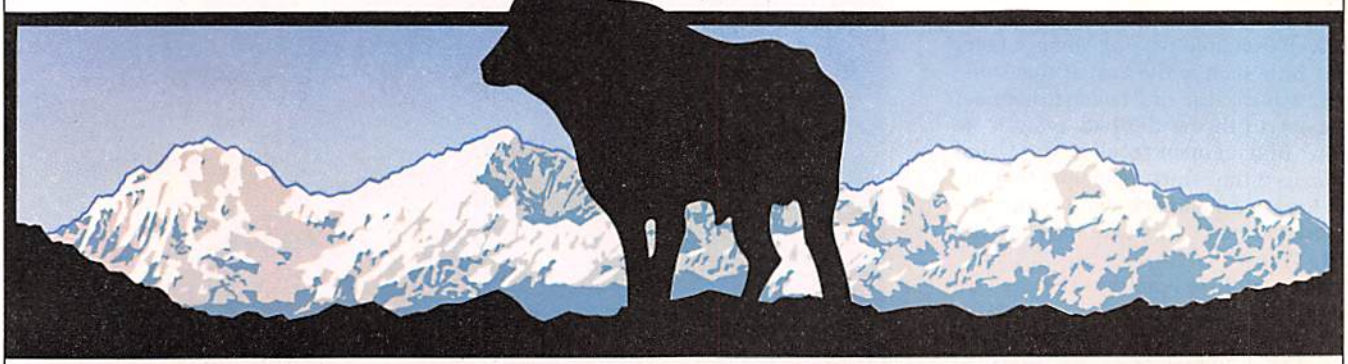

Warner's creative genius has left other legacies. One is the body block, which he developed in 1906 as an adjunct to the shoulder block; another was the use of protective pads, which he fashioned by molding soaked pieces of fabric into the various body contours, then coating them with varnish to assume durability.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Since 1972 Jack Clary has been a full-time freelance writer specializing in sports. Before '72 he spent 15 years as a sportswriter-columnist for the A.P., the New York World Telegraph & Sun and the Boston Herald Traveler. Clary has written eight books on football, including a collaboration with Paul Brown on Brown's autobiography.

Despite Jess Harper's disavowal, he put the passing game on a popular plane when his Notre Dame team, with Rockne and Dorais, defeated Army in 1914. They popped the eyes of the eastern press with their well-executed passing game, a facet of play little seen in the East at that time. Harper was also the first coach to instruct his passer to throw the ball away if he couldn't find an open receiver (1915) and popularized the "shift" principle that became Rockne's hallmark—and hence the rival to Warner's formations—for the next 15 years.

Knute Rockne admitted that he was never an innovator, but he was a master salesman for the sport, as well as for his own system, which had its roots in Harper's and Stagg's methods. Rockne also wrote—and rewrote—coaching books which helped to inject his personality and enthusiasm into the game, particularly his ability to depart from the usual. The game became better when others followed these dictums.

Bob Zuppke, along with Warner, was perhaps Rockne's foremost coaching rival. Zuppke's Illinois teams became pioneers in the passing game, as he was the first to drop back his offensive guards as pass blockers (1920). He developed the "flea-flicker pass" in 1925. In that year's game vs. Penn, a pass went from a would-be punter to the right end, who then took a few steps forward to draw the tacklers, and then tossed the ball back to Red Grange. Grange picked up a screen of blockers and ran for a TD.

Percy Haughton was instrumental in opening up the game with the forward pass.

Jess Harper's Notre Dame teams demonstrated the effectiveness of a well-executed passing game.

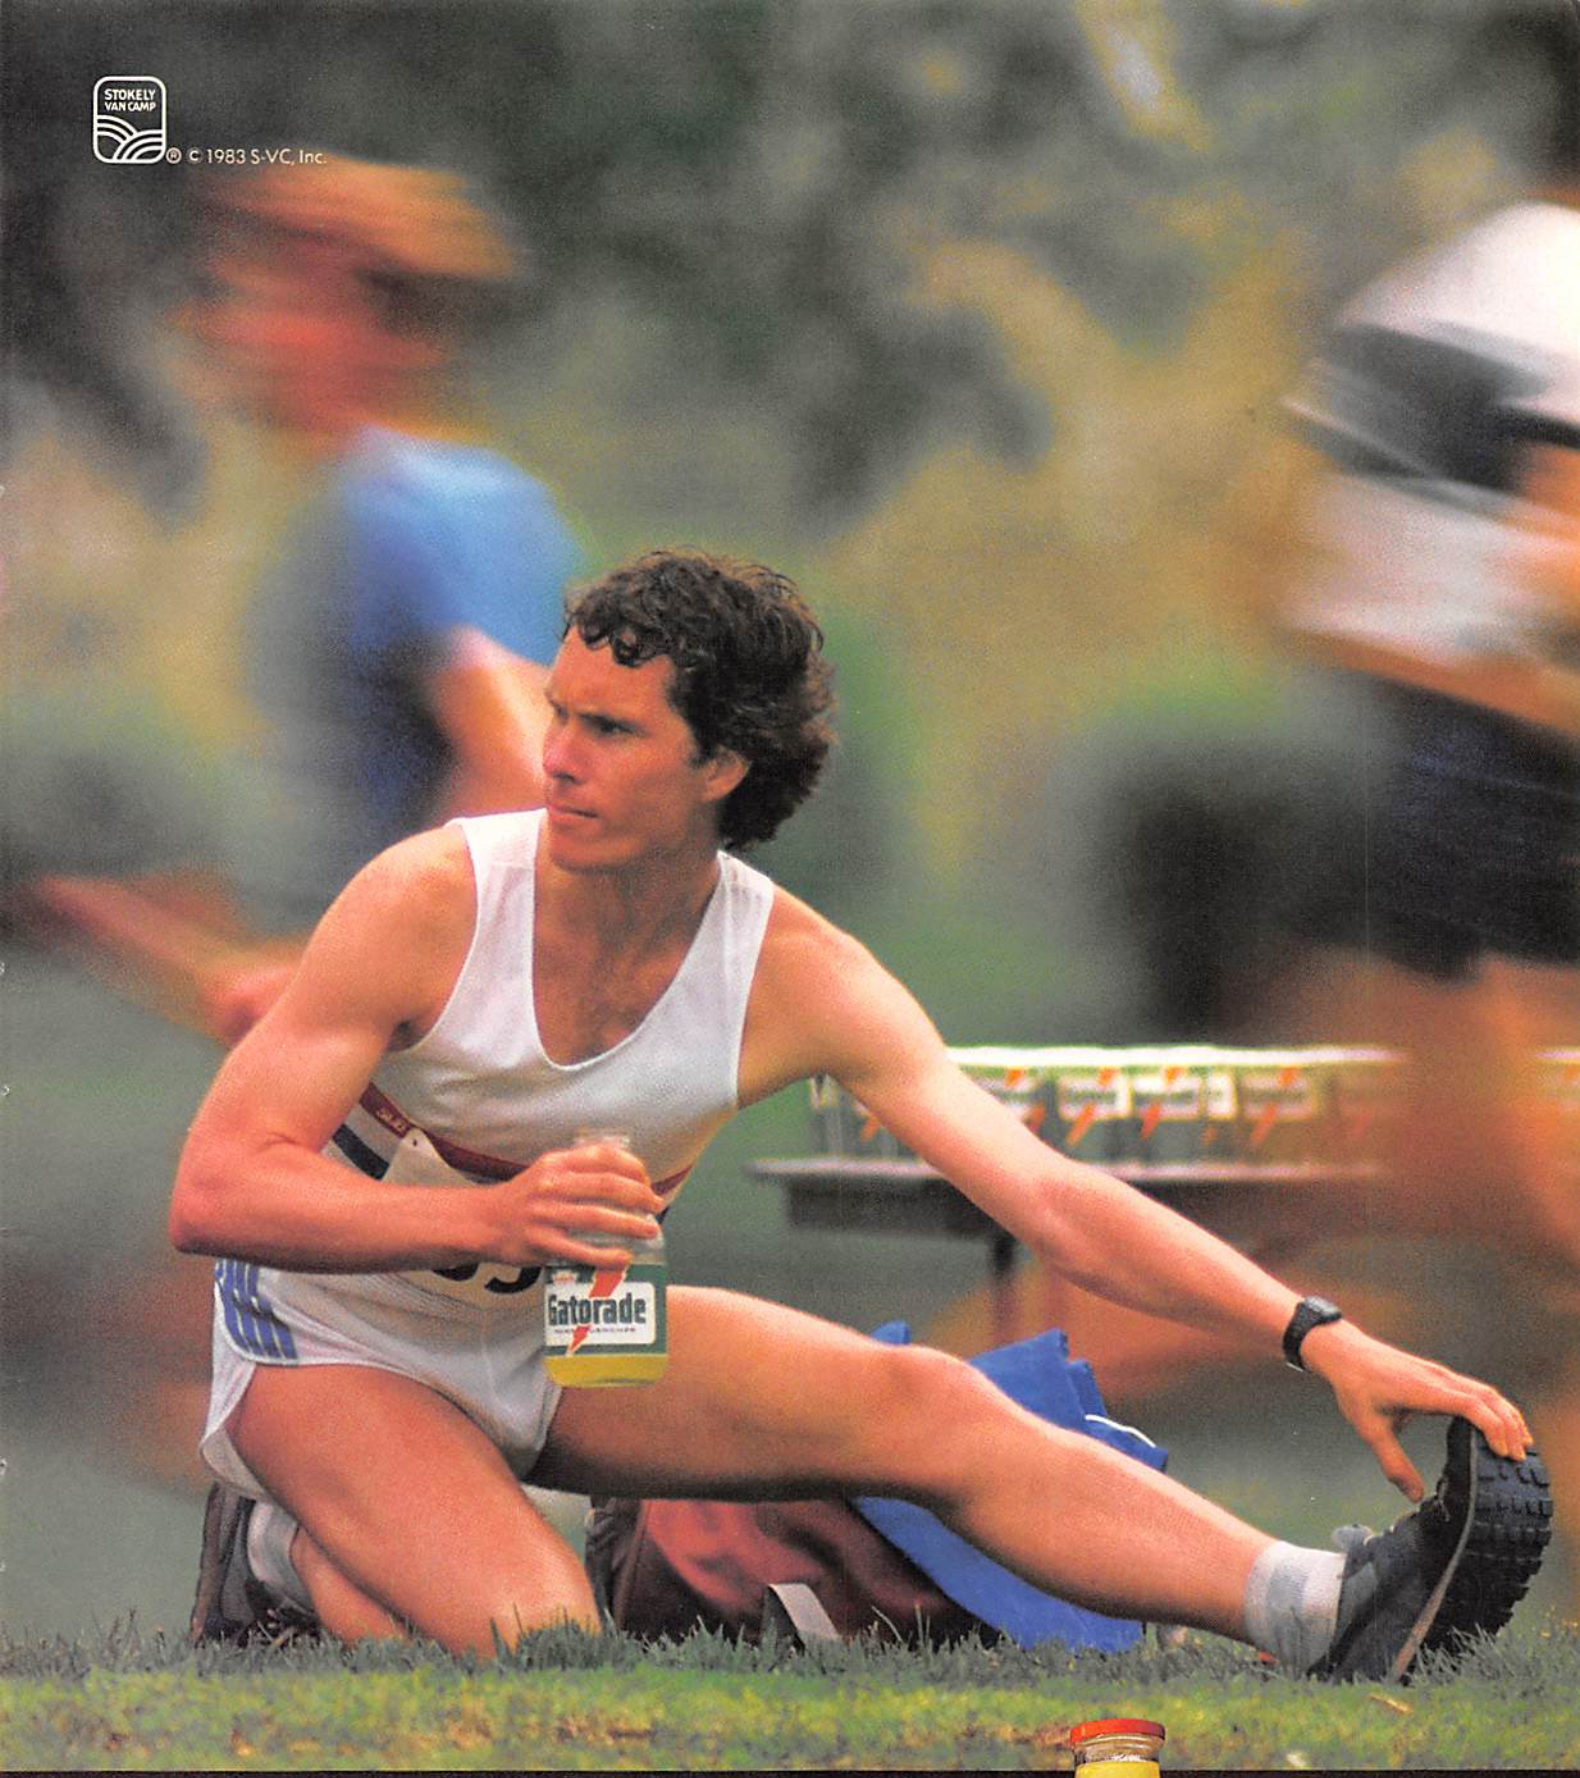

Zuppke, who came directly from Oak Park High School, Illinois, to the University of Illinois as a head coach, also introduced the huddle for calling signals and utilized his guards as linebackers to defend against passes (1920). He was constantly improving on the various spread pass formations and claims to have been the first to use the screen pass. Few dispute the claim that he popularized it at Illinois in the 1920s.

George Halas, coach of the Chicago Bears, revived the T in the 1930s and called Clark Shaughnessy, then coaching at the University of Chicago, to help him perfect the system. Shaughnessy studied the various aspects of putting men in motion, and when he became Stanford's head coach in 1940, took the system and had an unbeaten season, including a victory over Nebraska in the Rose Bowl.

Shaughnessy was a moody genius who forever tinkered with offenses, but his greatest flair was in developing the little wrinkles—using men in motion and the slotting of receivers to open a defense and better utilize a running offense.

From his success at Stanford came the revolution of the T-formation in college football, though the key to Shaughnessy's early success was the ball-handling wizardry of QB Frank Albert, whose slickness mesmerized defenses and enabled such talented runners as Hugh Gallerneau, Pete Kmetovic and Norm Standlee to romp, and also to gain himself extra time to execute Shaughnessy's myriad passing formations.

An excellent coach for years at Alabama and Duke, Wallace Wade revolutionized the protective equipment by introducing lighter, yet better-fitting pads which added speed and greater safety for his players. He also was the first coach to equip his backs with low-cut shoes, when he ordered a pair made in 1925 for his great Alabama running back Johnny Mack Brown, later a great Western movie star.

It shows you've come to play.

LEARNING TO DEFEND THE FORMATIONS

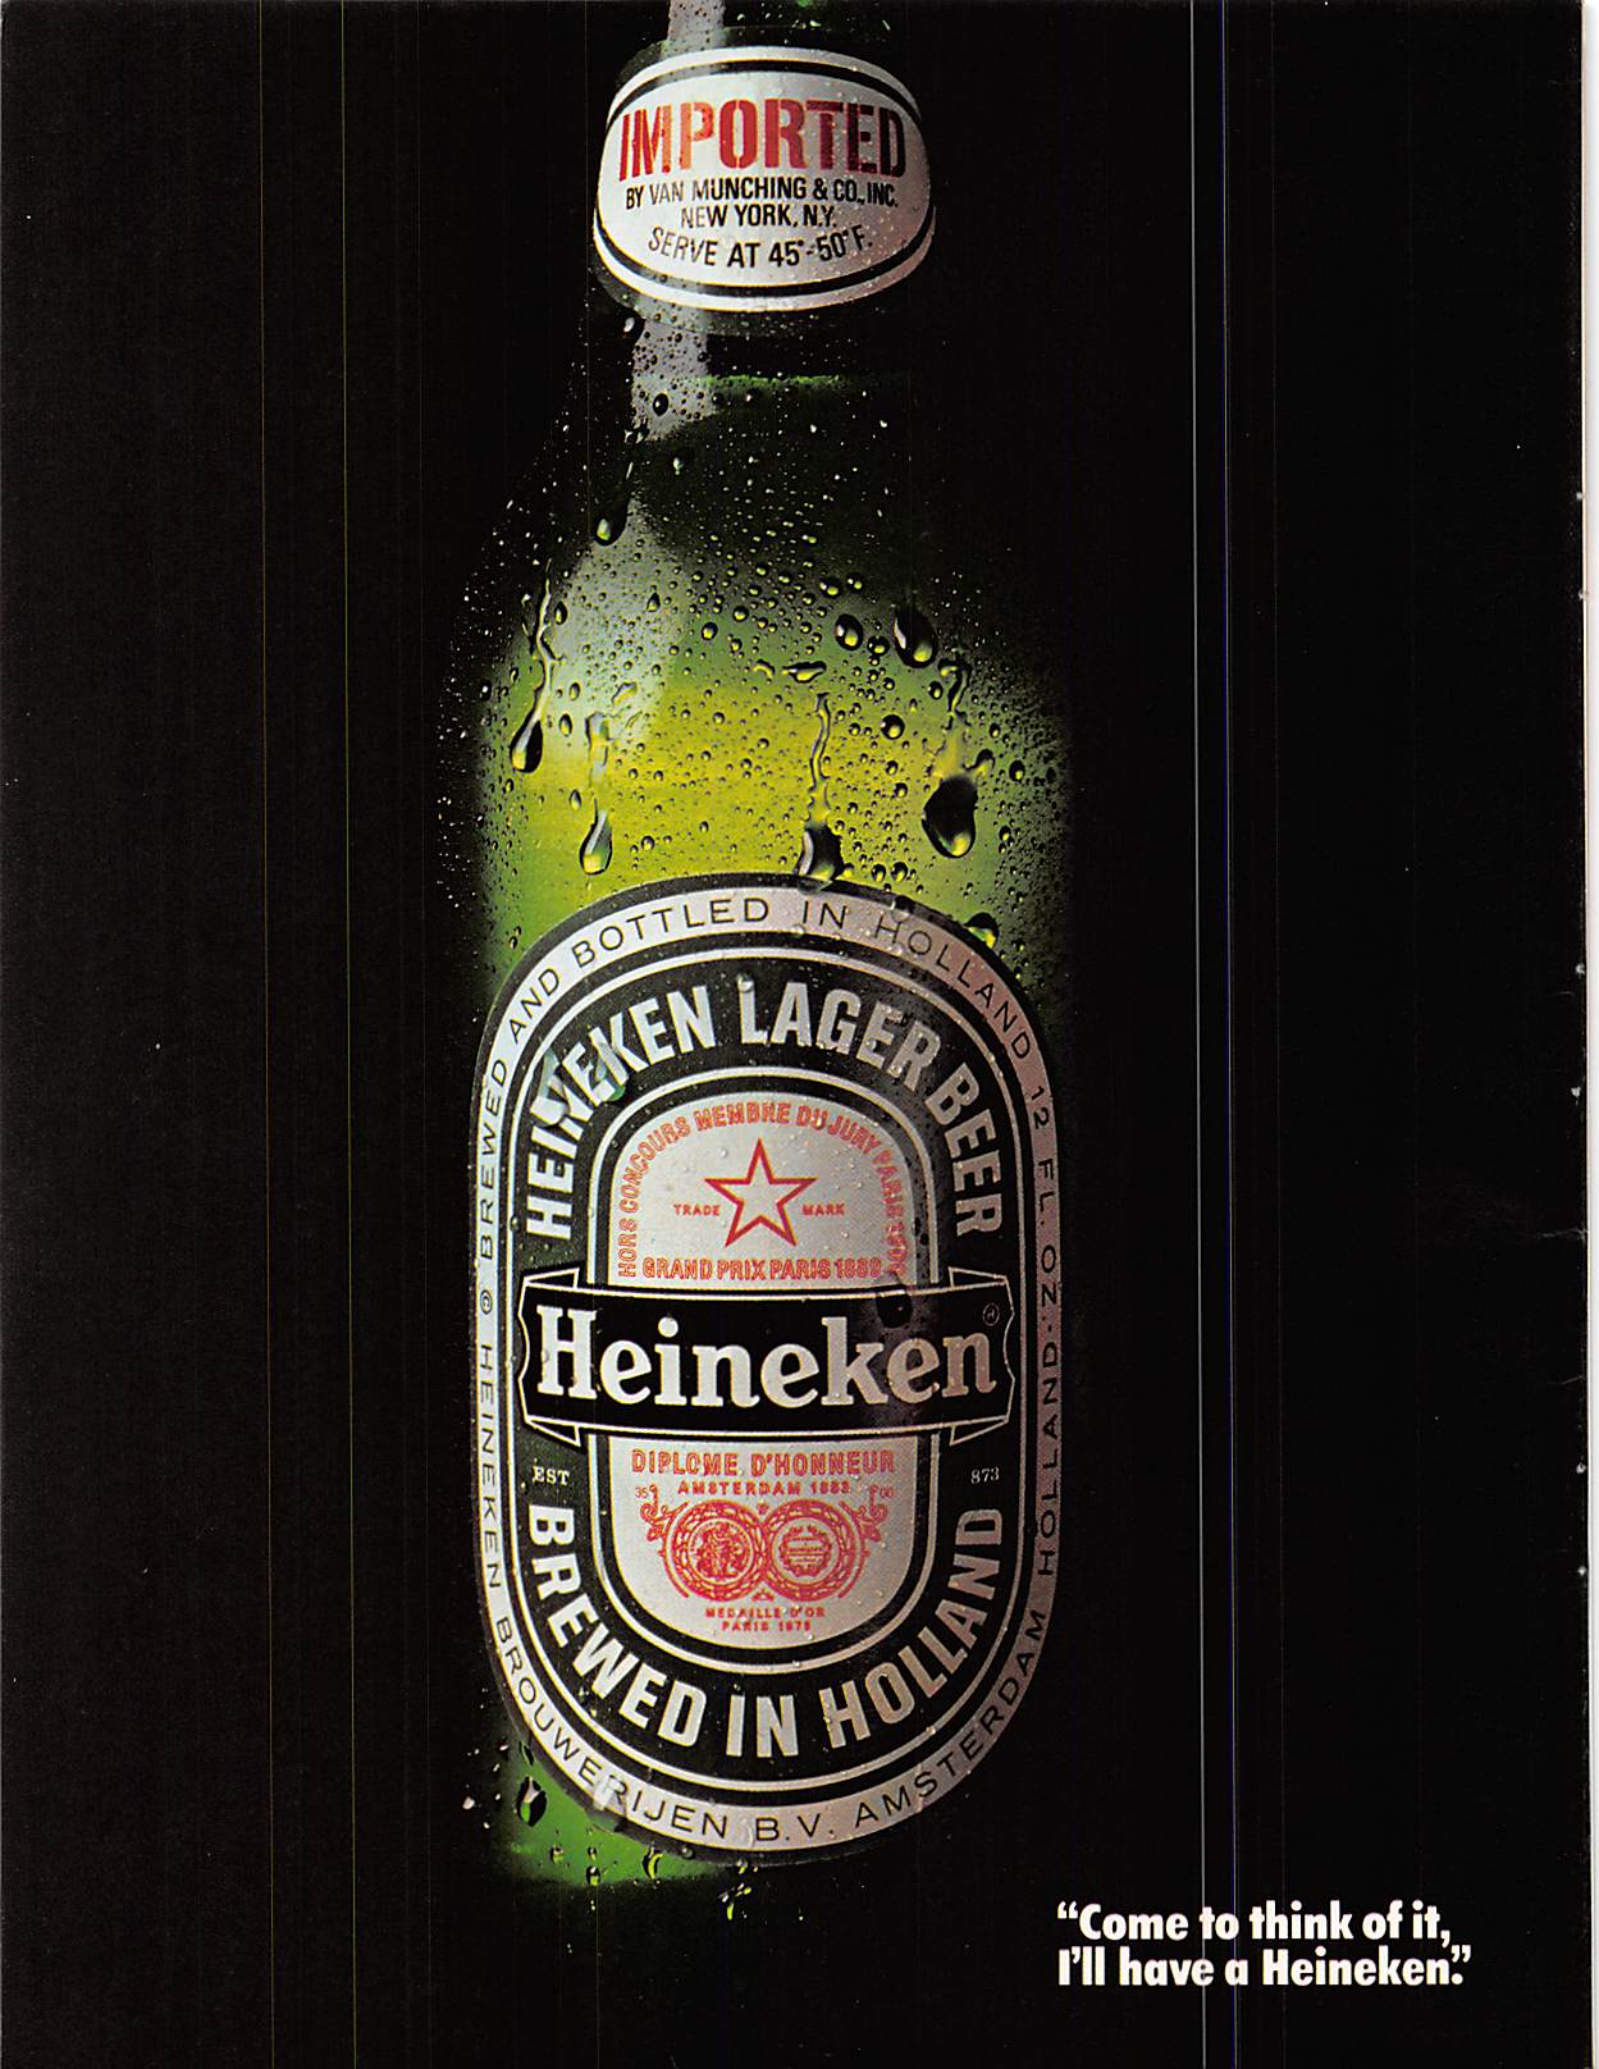

by Glenn Dickey,
San Francisco Chronicle

The biggest problem college football defenders have is not defending any one individual formation but working against the multiple formations that have become the vogue.

"Defense is mostly recognition," says a Southeastern Conference coach. "If a team shifts from one formation into another, it slows down the recognition time for the defense, and that can make the difference between a gain and a loss."

continued

"Come to think of it, I'll have a Heineken."

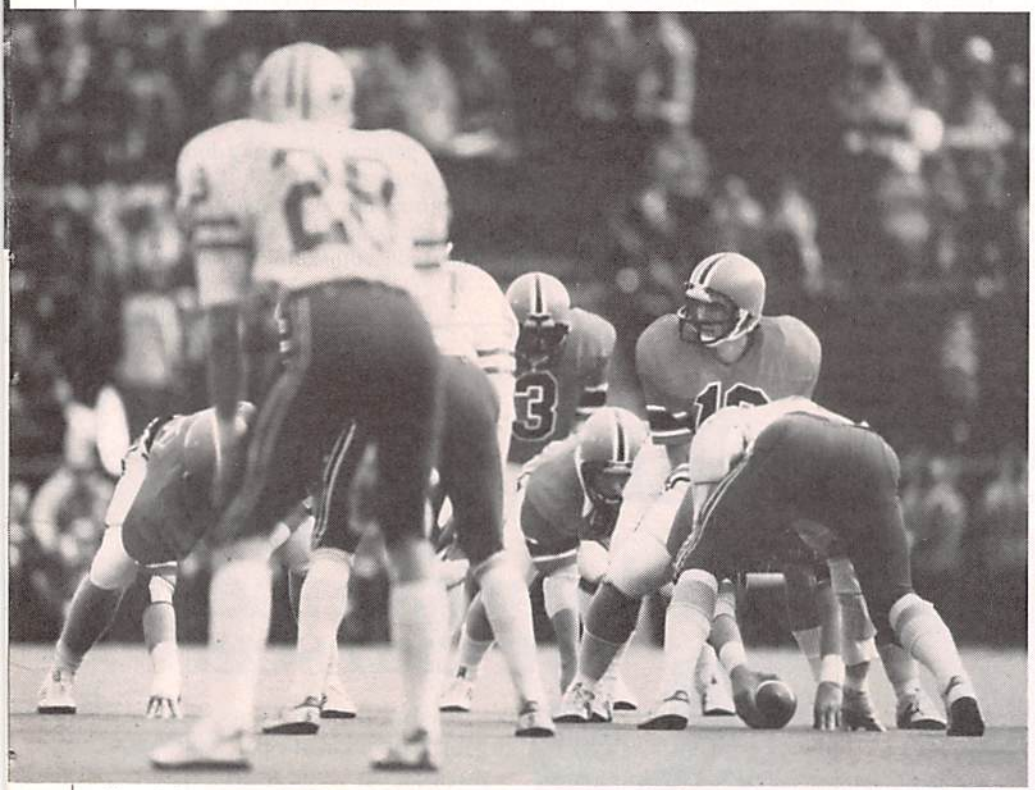

continued

A Big Ten defensive tackle concurs. "I want to be able to react as quickly as possible," he says. "In the line, you don't have time to stop and think about what's happening. But when I'm set for one formation and the offense shifts into another, it takes time for me to adjust, and that slows down my reaction time."

The problem is just as acute for linebackers. "When the offense shifts from one formation to another, we have to change our coverage," says a linebacker from an eastern independent. "It's even possible we might go from a man coverage to zone, or vice versa. The offense only has to set one second after the shift. It takes us longer than that to switch, and they may catch us while we're still on the action fake and come up too soon, I could see a pass going over my head for a touchdown.

"If I know a team is basically either a running or passing team, I can 'cheat,' playing one more than the other. But if they do both well, I'm between a rock and a hard place."

But even in the secondary, the multiple formations cause problems. "You take a team like San Jose State," says a Southwest Conference defensive back. "They can run 5-6 variations on each play. They came down here to play Baylor a couple of years ago, and the Baylor DBs never did figure out what was happening to them. You've got to be switching coverages all the time or they'll nickel-and-dime you all

The defense must be alert for shifting formations.

In the secondary, too, defenders have to change coverages when a shift comes, but defensive backs have a slight luxury because they're playing further off the ball and thus have somewhat more time. Their greatest problem is what teams run out of whatever formation they're in.

"My biggest worry is a team which is really balanced between running and passing," says a Pac-10 cornerback, "because I have two jobs: defending against a pass or helping against the run. If I'm slow coming up to support on a run, they could rip off a big gain. But if I go for a play day with those short slant passes and then, when you're finally looking for one of those, hit you with the bomb."

The coaches have to keep alive, too. "With all the changing formations," says a Big Eight coach, "you've got to make sure you're not, for instance, caught in a nickel (five-back) defense when they're playing two tight ends, or they'll run right over you.

"The key is watching who comes out of the game, not who goes in. A wide receiver might go in, but you don't know what that means until you see whether he's replacing another wide reciever or a tight end or a running back. That tells you what kind of formation they'll be in."

Some coaches believe in attacking the multiple formation offenses with multiple formation defenses. A defensive coach for a midwestern independent explains it this way: "I want to use so many different defenses that an offensive coach looking at films says, 'We can't possibly prepare for all those defenses, so we'll just pare our offense down to 4 or 5 plays that we can really work on.' Then, in the first half of the game, we analyze what they're doing with their offense and attack them."

Sometimes, too, defensive coaches will try to structure their defenses in such a way that they force the offense to do something it doesn't want to do.

"If you're playing a Wishbone team," says a Big Eight coach, "with a quarterback who is a good runner but a halfback who is outstanding, you want to take away the pitch. So, you have your defensive end go upfield on every play. That way, the outstanding back might carry eight times in the game and the quarterback 20. You might still lose—but you're giving yourself a better chance."

Football is a bruising game, but it's also a chess game, as offensive and defensive coaches continually try to get an edge. One offensive formation is successful for a while, and then the defense catches up with it and another one comes in. "I'm scared to death that somebody will come out with the single wing," says a Big Ten coach. "I've never had to defense it and I'm sure it would drive everybody crazy for a while."

The Wishbone offense is a good example of that. For a time, it was the most successful college offense. In recent years, though, it's been phased out; even some of the well-known Wishbone teams are using other formations this year.

"One of the big reasons for its success at first was the fact that not many teams were using it," says a Pac-10 coach. "It's hard to defense an offense you don't run yourself; you'll see that running teams always have the most trouble defensively against passing teams.

"That's because you never see the plays run at full-speed in practice. You can have your 'scout' team (reserves and redshirts) run the plays, but they certainly aren't going to run them with the skill or speed that a real Wishbone opponent will. So, when you get in a game, you're shocked by how fast those backs are going by you."

Another problem was that the defense didn't know how to stop the Wishbone at first. "The first idea," says a Southeastern Conference coach, "was that we'd assign a specific defensive man to each offensive

man. One man would have the quarterback, another man would take the trailing back, and so forth.

"The problem was that the offense would figure out who was responsible for the quarterback and they'd do what they call 'load' blocking, double teaming him, and the quarterback would run free all day."

The next advance, notes a Big Ten coach, was to assign areas of responsibility, and to change them on every play, so the offense wouldn't catch on. "Then, we got more sophisticated and had players checking things off. First, they'd look for the quarterback to carry the ball; if he didn't, then they'd look for the pitch, and so forth."

But, most coaches and players agree, the Wishbone can still be a potent offense. "I don't think it's so much that the defense caught up with it," says the coach of an eastern independent, "as that it got harder and harder to get four good backs to run it. And, if you've got one really good back, you want to run him more.

"I thought at one time I had that offense figured out. We beat a good Wishbone team one year, stopped them cold. But the next year, we played them again and they really drilled us. So, I have to admit, it's a good formation."

A Southwest Conference defensive lineman agrees. "The thing that always really impressed me about it was that it's such a good power running formation. Everybody gets caught up in the option play, following the flow, and then they run that fullback dive up the middle. I'll bet if you checked most Wishbone teams, that was their big play.

"And, the tough thing about playing against a Wishbone team is that you have to be so disciplined. They're always well-balanced, running to both sides, so you can't favor one side or the other. You have to carry out your assignment exactly, because if one man gets blocked out, that's all it takes for them to make a big gain.

"The only time I really enjoyed playing against a Wishbone was when we were ahead with not much time left. Then, they'd have to throw, and I knew we had them."

Another good running formation is the I-formation. Says a Pac-10 defender, "It's a good power running formation. They really come at you. It's not a real tough passing formation to defend against because the backs can't get out very easily as pass receivers.

"If you can match up physically against a team, the I-formation doesn't present a lot of problems."

The best passing formation is, of course, the pro set, with split backs. "Good passing teams can get five receivers out from that formation," says a Big Ten coach, "and that puts a lot of pressure on the DBs and linebackers. You'd better have people that can cover."

And now, the trend in college ball is to use a single running back with two wide receivers and two tight ends. That puts pressure on the defense in several ways.

"The vogue in college ball has been to have fewer people on the defensive front, but when the offense puts three blockers on both sides of the ball, the defense has to have more people up front," says a Pac-10 coach.

"It gives the offense perfect balance, because they can run to either side, with the tight end leading the blocking. Or, they can use either tight end as a pass receiver and give the defense fits if they don't have somebody who can cover.

"I don't know any offensive formation that is easy to stop—but I'd have to say that's the hardest one going now."

HOW THE PLAYERS GAIN AN EDGE

by Mark Hyman, Dallas Times Herald

He is a wide-out for a top-ten football school.

A junior.

Son of a college educator.

An honors student who carries a 3-plus grade point average.

He is a young man who takes tremendous pride in his performance, who dissects each frame of game film down to the sprockets.

He is a thinking-man's football player.

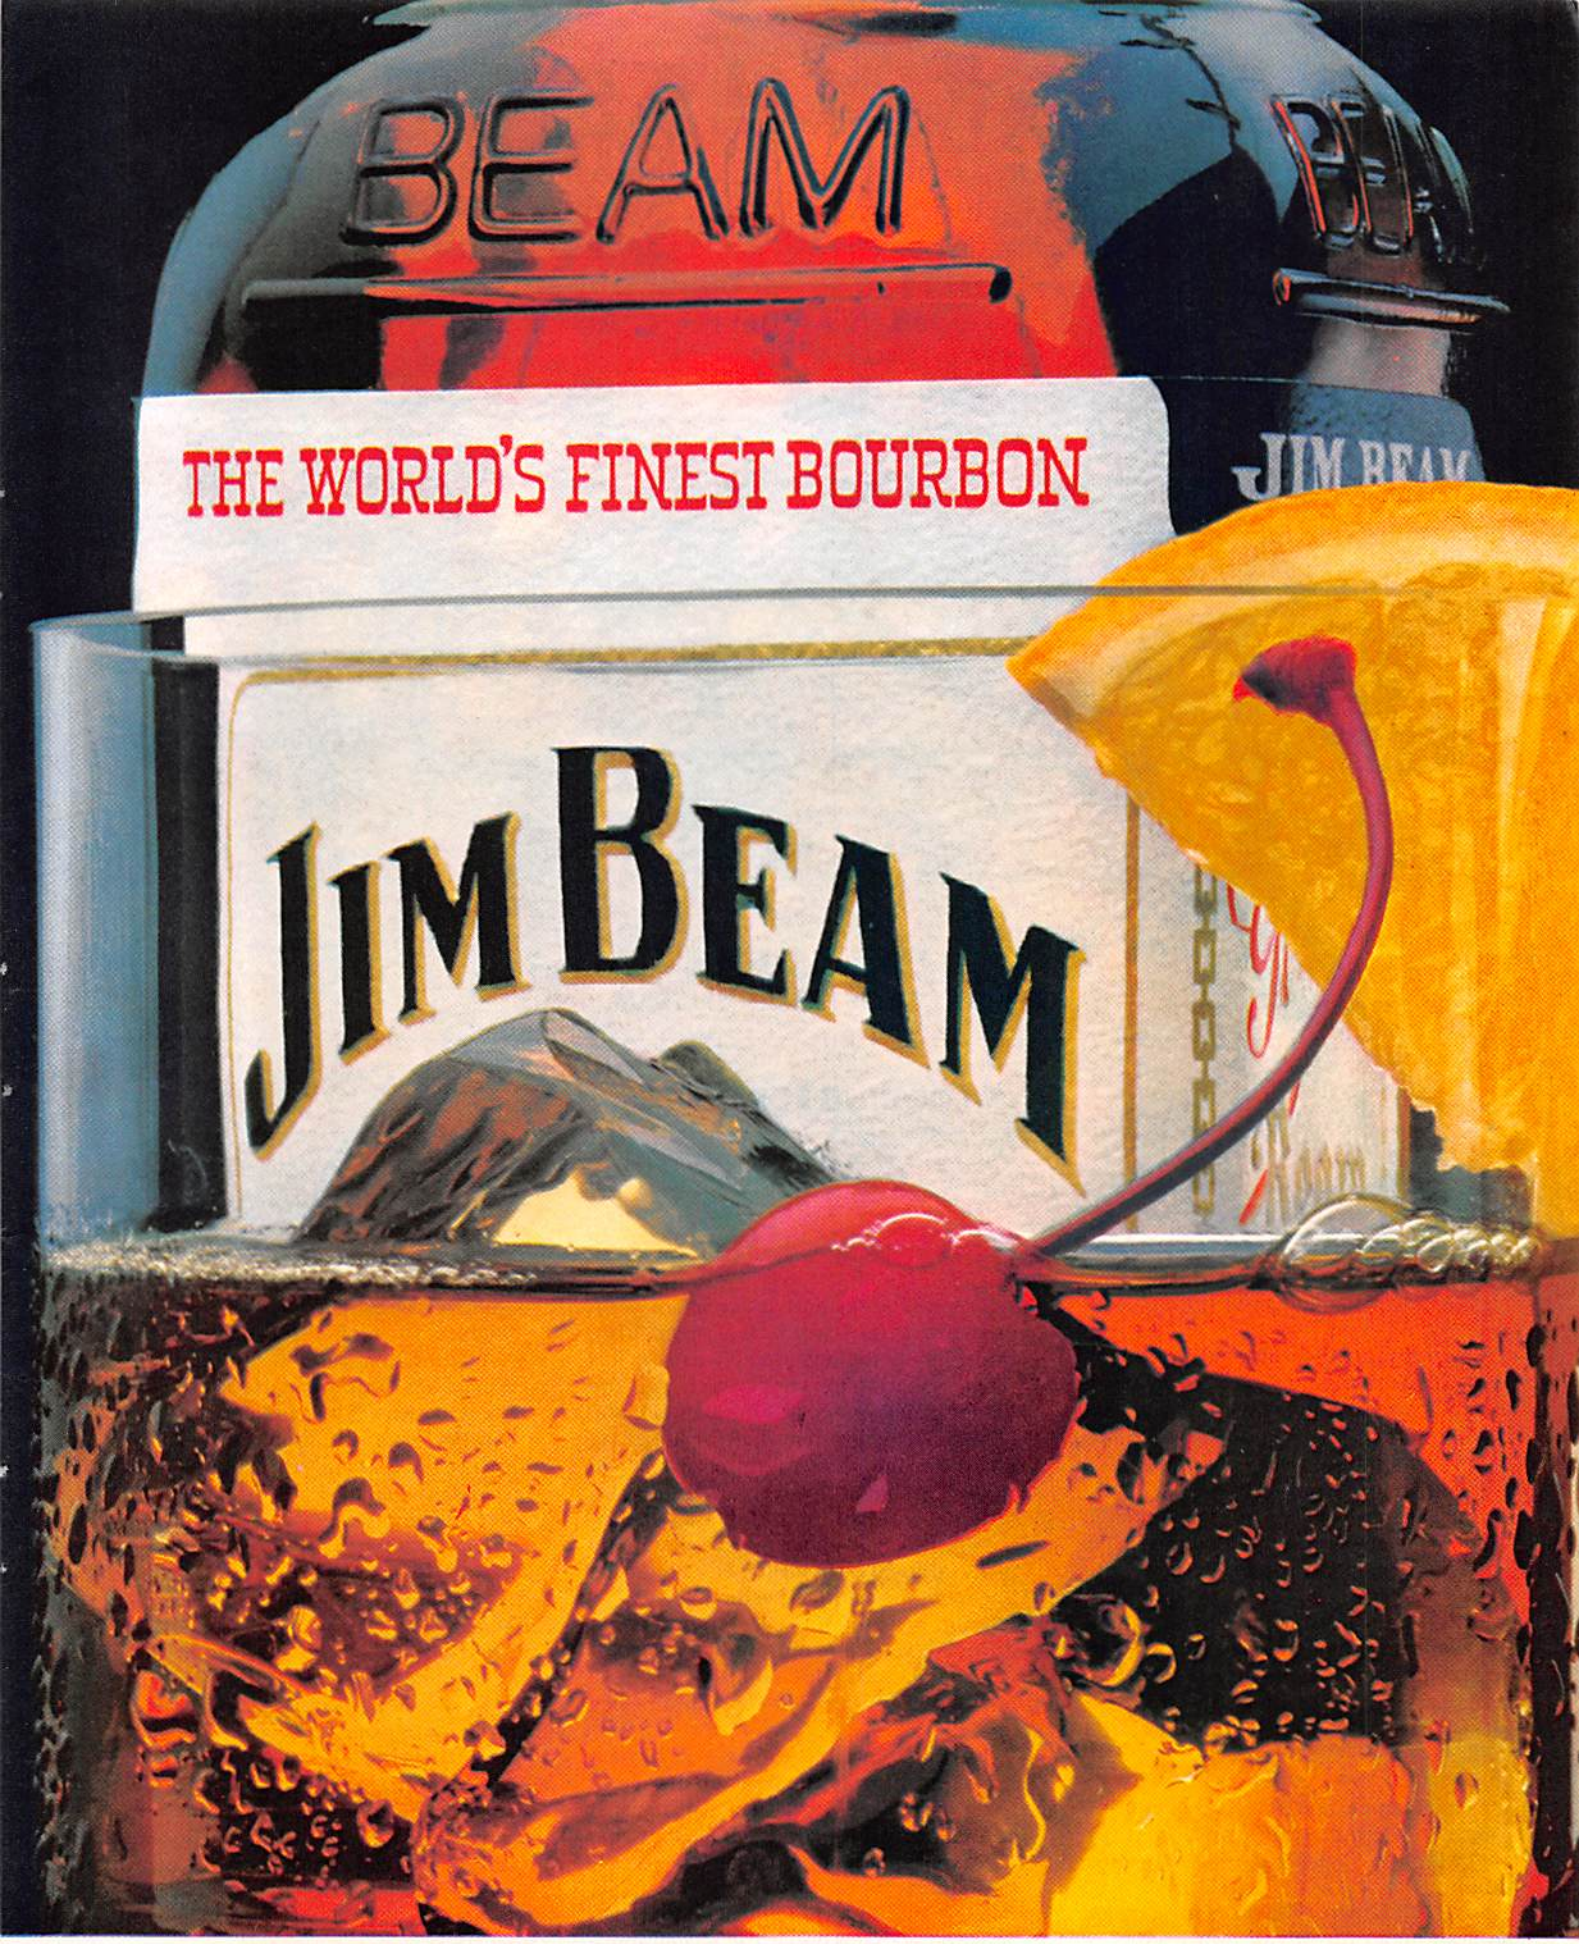

Or so he thought.

One day last season the wide-out was chatting with his brother, a former college player. Casually, as if asking for a match, his brother shared a minute point he had noticed during the game. He wondered if his pass-catching brother knew.

"He said he could tell whenever I was going out for a pass," the wide-out said, "and that the clue was whether I wiped my hands on my towel; when I used the towel, the play was coming at me.

"At first, I thought he was way off. Sure, I wipe my hands but I do that on every play, whether I'm going out for a pass or not.

"Then my brother pointed out something I was doing, not even knowing it. When I wasn't going out, I'd wipe my hands once. On the line. But on plays when I was getting ready to catch a pass, I wiped twice. On the line and in the huddle. I gave myself away every time."

The wide-out's reply: "I hope those DBs (defensive backs) aren't seeing everything you are."

Right there, the wide-out resolved never to commit another towel tip-off. You'll know him when you see him. He's the guy who always has his hands in terrycloth—on the line, in the huddle and in his business law classes.

As linemen go, he's not that big (6-0), or tough (his middle name's Forrest) or angry (his most aggressive hobby is snow skiing).

But this lineman, who plays for a major college program in the Southwest, is shrewd. No doubt about that.

He lends an attentive ear at all team meetings. His teammates voted him, "Most Likely to Work up a Sweat" for his flawless work habits in practice. He's the kind of guy you see walking around campus squeezing a rubber ball or knocking down dormitories. Anything to keep in shape, get that little edge.

He doesn't like to talk about what he calls "the keys," those subtle signals he picks up and uses to influence a defensive lineman this way, or wrestle that way.

Nope, private stuff. When you've got the edge, you hang on to it like a sack of macadamia nuts. No blabbing it to some newspaper for every lineman in America to read.

However, in the interests of honest reporting, our pal the lineman agreed to let us in on one of his deepest, darkest secrets with the promise that his name and mouthguard be changed to protect his identity.

Remember this. You never know when you'll be walking down the street and a 280-pound tackle will jump out from behind a garbage can.

"I look at fingertips," our lineman said.

At what? countered the glib reporter.

"Fingertips," our lineman repeated.

Are you going to be a manicurist?

"No, I'm serious. One look at the tips of a guy's fingers and I usually can tell if a big pass rush is coming."

You're joking.

"Nope."

How does that work?

"If the guy's fingertips change color, that means he's really coming out hard."

Say what?

"It's simple. If he's coming out hard he wants to get a big ol' jump off the ball, like a human slingshot or something. After the snap, he's all over you. The only way I know to do that is to put all your weight forward, to lean into it so much you can hardly keep from falling flat on your face. When a guy does that he's got all his weight on his fingertips.

"Have any idea what that does to his fingertips?"

Well . . . changes their color?

(Slapping the reporter's back.) "Congratulations, Sherlock."

The folks who participate in major college football can be sliced into two categories, the trickers and the tricked. You're either doing it to somebody or somebody is doing it to you.

Call it deception. Call it playing smart. But make no mistake, there's more to college football than the neat configuration of X's and O's shovelled at tube viewers every Saturday.

Everybody in college football is looking for the edge, that little bit that divides winner from losers. It's awfully nice to think you can practice hard five times a week, eat right and give your life to Nautilus and be assured of a winning football team.

It's awfully nice. But it's not always true.

The really successful major college programs are those that go beyond sound technique and diet. The coaches at these schools give their players a little bit more,

Defensive backs sometimes look at a running back's feet or a receiver's eyes to get an edge on the play.

the racer's edge, an appendix to the playbook.

We're not talking about trick plays, about draws, end-arounds and misdirection. Or even the more exotic shenanigans like the Statue of Liberty, flea-flicker or Bumerooski.

Nope, we're talking big-league deception here, sleight of hand worthy of the Amazing Kreskin.

At this point, we should pause to slice our discussion of college football trickery into two main categories:

Category No. 1: tricks, reads, edges (legal).

Category No. 2: tricks, reads, edges (legend).

Let's deal with the second category first.

"I never saw this," prefaced a Division I coach, a little too insistently.

"Years ago, back when I was an assistant, I remember hearing about one fella making it so he'd never fumble the football again as long as he lived.

"He'd take a tack—regular 'ol thumb tack—and dull that edge just a li'l bit, just enough so that you wouldn't bloody yourself on it.

"Then he'd get some adhesive tape and wrap that tack to his thumb. Only a li'l bit of the tack stuck out, just enough so that when he had the ball restin' against it, there wasn't any way for it to come loose."

The coach smiled.

"Damndest thing you ever saw," he said, scratching the back of his neck. "As long as you'd watch that fella run, as hard as you'd see him get hit, he never fumbled. He held onto the ball just like it was stuck to him."

And there's the story of the too-tight jersey.

"Our linemen were getting thrown around something terrible one year," said a veteran assistant coach and offensive coordinator. "It got to the point where we had to do something.

"Finally, we came up with the idea of getting hold of some carpeting tape, you know, the kind that sticks on both sides. Before our players put on their jerseys, we'd cover them with that stuff.

"Nobody ever grabbed those shirts again. The way they stuck to that tape, well it was like second skin. There literally wasn't anything to hold on to . . . Best idea I ever had."

Such is the stuff of football lore.

Next, legal tricks.

Cadence.

There are quarterbacks who have made a career of tripping up defenses, and doing it with no more than an off-beat inflection and a "hut . . . hut . . . hut."

A quarterback who knows how to use it can march his team up and down the field without ever taking a snap.

Foot fault.

"Sometimes I'll look into the backfield and see a running back's feet pointed off in one direction," said a perceptive defensive end at a Division I school. "Nine times in 10, it's guaranteed he's coming that direction."

Private eyes.

Something as harmless as a gaze, eyes trained in a particular direction, can tip off a defender. One defensive back tells of covering a receiver, one of the best in his conference, who had a habit of lifting his eyes in the direction of the route he was about to run. "It took me a while to catch on," he said, "but once I did,it was the easiest day I ever had."

And there are others.

Some won't be printed because the players who use them insist they remain secret. Others simply are too saucy for the printed page.

But they're out there, being used and abused.

"If it helps," one player said, "I want to know about it."

One offensive lineman said he could predict a big pass rush by observing the defensive lineman's fingertips.

Not-So-Famous Trophies In College Sports

by Mary Schmitt, Milwaukee Journal

The Bronze Boot Trophy goes to the winner of the Colorado State-Wyoming conflict.

The winner of the annual game between Mississippi and Mississippi State takes home the Golden Egg Trophy.

The King Spud Trophy goes to the victor of the Idaho-Idaho State basketball game each year.

Red. It is everywhere. Red doors, red railings, red stairs, red carpet, red chairs. The University of Wisconsin football offices are awash in it. Only the white walls—after all, the school colors are Cardinal and White—offer any relief.

Yes, red is definitely the first thing you notice about the UW offices. The second thing is a bit more unusual. It is an axe. A seven-foot, double-edged axe. It is the Paul Bunyan Axe, donated by the National W Club, and it goes to the winner of the annual Wisconsin-Minnesota game.

Wisconsin has won it the past five seasons, and it is hanging on the wall opposite the front door of the football offices. It is not quite as impressive as the huge, color wall mural of the football stadium on one wall or the encased duplicate of the Heisman Trophy won by Alan Ameche in 1954, but it still is one of the most prominent items in the office.

The double blade at the top is red and white on one side, and that's the side that shows when it hangs at UW. If you turn it over, the blade on the other side is maroon and gold. Written in black letters down the nearly seven-foot long wooden handle are the scores of each game played since 1948, when the schools began exchanging the axe. Wisconsin already has started to write down the edge of the handle, because the front side is full. And 1982's victory isn't even included.

"I don't think it has anything to do with building the rivalry," said Coach Dave McClain of Wisconsin, looking up at the axe, which is considerably taller than he is. "It's a natural rivalry. The states are right next to each other. But I think the kids are into it a little bit. We've won it for a few years now, and I think they want to keep it.

"We bring it down the week of the game and tell the kids about it. And then we take it with us each game, because we have to turn it over if we lose. Our managers have a felt sleeve for it, and they bring it along." (Presumably, the managers wouldn't mind leaving it behind every once in a while instead of lugging it back and forth.)

"Things could change, though. This is the first time in a long time we don't end the season with Minnesota. Now they're in the middle of our schedule. That might make the axe more meaningful. Before, it was the end of the season against a big rival and the game was the important thing. I think the axe may become more of a factor now."

To be sure, the axe is only one of many such football trophies exchanged between schools. Many of them are not quite as famous as California and Stanford's axe or Minnesota and Michigan's Little Brown Jug or Indiana and Purdue's Old Oaken Bucket, but they are every bit as much a part of college football.

There are, for instance, at least four Victory Bells (Cincinnati-Miami of Ohio, Duke-North Carolina, Pacific-San Jose State and Southern Cal-UCLA); one regular Bell (Nebraska-Missouri); one Mission Bell (Long Beach State-Fullerton), and one Blue Key Victory Bell, named for an honorary organization at Ball State, which goes to the winner of the annual Ball State-Indiana State game.

There are at least three Governor's Cups (Alabama-Auburn, Florida-Florida State and Kansas-Kansas State); one Governor's Trophy (Utah-Utah State); one Alumni Governor's Cup (Dartmouth-Princeton) and one governor's cup that masquerades as something called the Broomhead Trophy, donated by Fred Broomhead for the winner of the Brown-Rhode Island game.

On a lower level, politically speaking, there is one Mayor's Cup (San Diego-San Diego State) and one Mayor's Trophy (Southern Methodist-Texas Christian).

And there are all sorts of Memorial trophies, named after alumni or officials: the Charles L. Anspach Trophy (Central Michigan-Eastern Michigan); the Norman E. Tice Memorial (Yale-Connecticut); the Class of 1915 Trophy (Cornell-Dartmouth); the Commander in Chief Trophy (Army-Navy-Air Force); the Centennial Trophy (Princeton-Rutgers), and even the Paul Bunyan Trophy, although Bunyan, a native Minnesotan, may seem a little out of place at the Michigan-Wisconsin State game.

There are two Rags (Louisiana State-Tulane and Northwestern Louisiana-Louisiana); two Shillelaghs (Notre Dame—who else would use an Irish walking stick as a trophy—Purdue and Notre Dame-Southern Cal) and a Flag (McNeese State-Southwestern Louisiana).

And there are plenty of fairly obvious trophies: the Megaphone (Michigan State-Notre Dame); the Cannon (Illinois-Purdue); the Bronze Boot (Colorado State-Wyoming); the Bronze Cowboy Hat (Oklahoma-Texas); the Apple Cup (Washington-Washington State); the Old Brass Spitoon (Indiana-Michigan State); the Tomahawk (Illinois-Northwestern); the Bayou Classic (Grambling-Southern); the Bayou Bucket (Houston-Rice) and the Kit Carson Rifle (Arizona-New Mexico). All of them are named for items found near or representative of their locations. Except, perhaps the Beer Barrel (Kentucky-Tennessee). Somehow whiskey or bourbon seems more appropriate.

Arizona and New Mexico fight each year for the Kit Carson Rifle.

There are a few that are not quite as obvious. Old Ironsides, for instance, is a heavy, three-sided iron pyramid, donated in 1951 by the Pittsburgh Junior Chamber of Commerce for the overall winner in head-to-head competition between Pittsburgh, Penn State and West Virginia.

The Golden Egg, named because of a football's resemblance to the shape of an egg, was started in 1927 by the student bodies of Mississippi and Mississippi State and goes to the winner of that annual game.

The Bell Clapper, which is exchanged between Oklahoma and Oklahoma State, got its start in 1931 when some Oklahoma fans climbed the bell tower at Oklahoma A&M (now Oklahoma State) and stole the bell clapper from inside the bell. Now they give it back if Oklahoma State wins, and vice versa.

The winner of the Missouri-Iowa State game gets the Telephone Trophy, which has a pretty unusual beginning. It seems that before a Missouri-Iowa State game in 1959, Coach Dan Devine of Missouri and one of his assistants put on their headsets, and the wires were all tangled up. As a result, they could hear the Iowa State coaches. Devine, fearing that Iowa State could hear Missouri's plans, got quite upset, and, later that season, tried to set up a relay system using telephones from the press box. Those wires got crossed, too, and finally Devine settled on walkie-talkies. Northwestern Bell of Ames, however, had a golden telephone made into a trophy to commemorate the incident.

The Beehive Boot, named after the beehive because it is a symbol of activity and industry, is an old, mounted, leather boot that goes to the best football team in the state of Utah among Brigham Young, Utah, Utah State and Weber State.

Utah State and Weber State don't meet as often since Weber State dropped into Division I-AA, but they compete for the Bear Trap, which is just that—a bear trap mounted on a block of wood.

There are a few trophies that are downright mysteries to outsiders.

The Silver Shako, for example, between the Citadel and VMI. According to Athletic Director Edward Teague of the Citadel, a shako is a cadet's dress hat with an elongated plume. The Silver Shako is an actual hat, silver-plated, and mounted on a walnut base.

Or there's the Sabine Shoe between Southwestern Louisiana and Lamar. It's named for the river that runs between Texas and Louisiana.

That area was settled by the Caddo Indians, hence, Chief Caddo is an eight-foot tall wooden statue of an Indian chief, that goes to the winner of the Northwestern Louisiana-Stephen F. Austin State game. The cheerleaders of the schools have to haul the chief around in a van from game to game.

A couple of live animals have had their plans in the football rivalries, too. In 1935, Floyd of Rosedale was a national championship hog, who became the object of a wager between the governors of Iowa and Minnesota. Now he is a 15½-inch bronze statue that goes to the winner of that game. Illibuck was a turtle that went to the winner of the Illinois-Ohio State game, starting in 1925. But the turtle died in 1927, and now the Illibuck is a wooden replica. Members of the honorary societies of the schools meet on the field at halftime to smoke the peace pipe and pay homage.

A couple of supposed trophies are mysteries even to the schools. Idaho and Montana are supposed to play for the Little Brown Stein, and Idaho and Idaho State are supposed to play for the Gem Bowl, but officials in Idaho have no idea what or where the trophies are. The Idaho schools will admit, however, to playing for what one official called the "world's ugliest trophy" in basketball—the King Spud Trophy, a 30-pound, silver potato.

Other than the mysterious trophies in Idaho, all of the trophies have traditions behind them. Some are hotly contested; some are mere souvenirs of a game. But, undoubtedly, the winners are proud to have them, for as long as possible.

In Villanova's case, that's a long time. Temple and Villanova used to play for the Quaker City Award, a sculpture of two cast iron football players on a pedestal, created by sculptor Joe Brown. But Villanova quit playing football two years ago, and, as a result of its 32-7 victory over Temple, retired the Quaker City Award.

Few trophies—no matter how famous or infamous—mean so much as that—that a school would drop its entire football program just to keep one.

VMI and the Citadel battle each year for possession of the Silver Shako Trophy.

COLORFUL NICKNAMES

The early years of college football produced many innovations in the game; legendary coaches and players; heated school rivalries, colorful characters; and some great nicknames, the likes of which are seldom seen these days. Coaches and players acquired nicknames from colleagues, fans or sportswriters, and those nicknames enlivened the already lively game.

Here are a few of the more interesting monikers from college football's past:

Players

—Albie Booth, Yale, "Little Boy Blue"
—Red Grange, Illinois, "The Wheaton Iceman" or "The Galloping Ghost"
—Morley Drury, Southern California, "The Noblest Trojan of Them All"
—Alvin Wistert, Boston University, "The Ox"
—E.J. Holub, Texas Tech, "The Beast"
—Francis Brown, Yale, "Skim"
—Frank Sinkwich, Georgia, "Flatfoot Frankie" or "The Georgia Fireball"
—Bill Corubs, Stanford, "The Baby-Faced Assassin"
—Robert Zastrow, Navy, "Zug"

Coaches

—Dewey Luster, Oklahoma, "Snorter"
—Douglas Walker, Wake Forest, "Peahead"
—Fielding H. Yost, Michigan, "Hurry Up"
—Heartley Anderson, Notre Dame, "Hunk"
—George Clark, Nebraska, "Potsy"
—Earle Neale, Yale, "Greasy"
—J.B. Whitworth, Alabama, "Ears"
—Gilbert Dobie, Washington, "Gloomy Gus"
—Madison Bell, Southern Methodist, "Moanin' Matty" —Frank Cavanaugh, Boston College & Fordham, "Iron Major"

XEROX

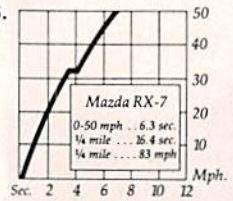

The key to office productivity is finding the "sweet spot" between product and application.

Experience Mazda RX-7. The one high-performance sports car that is not reserved for a privileged few.

The Mazda RX-7 experience. It is a sports car enthusiast's dream made real.

It is a rotary engine that can propel you from zero to 50 in just 6.3 seconds.

It is superb directional control made possible by a finely-tuned suspension system and anti-sway bars fore and aft.

It is a precise recirculating-ball steering gear that keeps you constantly in touch with the road below.

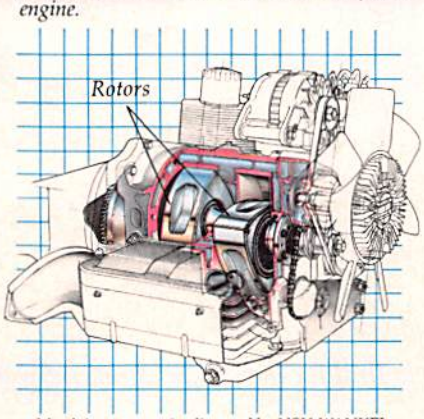

And to make the experience even more enjoyable, the RX-7 is an astonishing value—a sports car enthusiast's dream made affordable.

As you might expect of the best-selling two-seat sports car in America, the RX-7 has exceptional resale value. The Kelley Blue Book, September-October 1982, reports that a 1979 RX-7 S has retained 111.1% of its original sticker price, compared to 79.3% for a 1979 Datsun 280ZX.

If you are partial to the joys of high-performance motoring, all that remains is for you to climb into the RX-7's refined cockpit and head for the open road.

That is where the real RX-7 experience awaits you.

Because its rotors turn constantly in one direction, the Mazda RX-7's 100-horsepower rotary engine is smoother, more efficient, and more powerful for its size than a conventional piston engine.

Mazda's rotary engine licensed by NSU-WANKEL.

All Sessions at the Air Conditioned
Bob Devaney Sports Center
Learning Can Be Fun!

It takes many hours of hard work and dedication to excel in the game of basketball. A positive and fun learning experience will help each individual to achieve his potential. Coach Iba is pleased to announce that he will again have some of the top coaches in the Midwest helping us along with the Nebraska basketball staff.

BOYS' CAMP

For boys entering the sixth grade through boys entering their senior year in high school. All campers will be grouped according to their age and ability. Each day of camp will include instruction on individual offensive and defensive techniques, team concepts, and actual game competition.

BOYS TEAM CAMPS

CLASS C and D SCHOOLS

CLASS A and B SCHOOLS

There will be two one-week camps, one for Classes C and D schools only, one for Classes A and B schools only. Only high school age boys can participate. Each school must have a minimum of 8 players (we recommend 10), and a member of the high school's basketball staff will be coaching the team throughout the week. Each team will have daily practice sessions and play 3 or 4 games per day. There will be daily lecture and demonstrations by the Nebraska basketball staff or guest lecturers.

BOYS ELEMENTARY and JUNIOR HIGH DAY CAMP

For boys entering the fourth grade through boys entering the ninth grade. There will be a morning and afternoon session with the noon meal being provided. This is a day camp and each camper must provide for his own lodging. The morning session will begin at 9:00 A.M. and the afternoon session will end at approximately 4:30 P.M. Instruction will be given on individual offensive and defensive techniques as well as team concepts. Each camper will play 2 or 3 games per day.

THE TOUCHDOWN CLUB OF NEBRASKA

One of the groups most instrumental in helping the University of Nebraska Athletic Department grow in the field of intercollegiate sports is the Nebraska Touchdown Club.

Contributions from TD Club members have enabled the Cornhuskers to build a fine grant-in-aid program and continued support from the Touchdown Club, and groups like the Husker Achievement Awards, the Extra Point Club, and the Cornhusker Beef Club, will insure that the Nebraska Cornhuskers will always hold a prominent place in the college sports world.

The University of Nebraska Athletic Department salutes the many members of the Touchdown Club and takes this opportunity to say a sincere "Thank You."

Touchdown Club members contributing $150 or more are:

CIMARRON '84
THIS ONE'S GOT THE TOUCH.

The Cadillac touch. It's everywhere. You can feel it when you put Cadillac's road-hugging Touring Suspension to the test. You can see it ... inside and out. From leather-faced front buckets with lumbar support to a hand-buffed exterior finish. It's attention to detail, too. Like push-button air. And aluminum alloy wheels. You've got to drive this car ... and experience the Cadillac touch. Cimarron '84.

BEST OF ALL ... IT'S A CADILLAC.

Let's Get It Together ... Buckle Up.

This Is Syracuse University . . .

Founded in 1870, Syracuse University is an independent institution devoted to teaching and research. It is a member of the Association of American Universities.

The main campus of Syracuse University covers 200 acres and includes 170 academic buildings. Fifteen buildings are listed on the National Register of Historic Places, including the Hall of Languages (1873) and Crouse College (1889).

Syracuse University students come from all 50 states and from 101 foreign countries. Full-time students on the main campus total about 15,500, including 4,000 graduate students. Another 1,100 undergraduates and 350 graduate students are enrolled in the S.U.N.Y. College of Environmental Science and Forestry, which is also located on the main SU campus.

University College, the University's continuing education division, enrolls 3,500 part-time students, as well as 5,000 students in off-campus and independent degree programs.

In addition, another 1,400 undergraduates are enrolled in Utica College, a separate division of the University located in Utica, New York.

Syracuse University has a full-time work force of 3,200 faculty and staff and 5,000 part-time employees, making it the largest employer in the City of Syracuse.

Full-time faculty members on the main campus total 876, including 381 professors, 263 associate professors, 204 assistant professors, and 28 instructors.

Intercollegiate men's athletic teams compete in basketball, crew, cross country, football, gymnastics, lacrosse, soccer, swimming, indoor and outdoor track, and wrestling.

Intercollegiate women's teams compete in basketball, crew, cross country, field hockey, swimming and diving, tennis, track, and volleyball.

About 20 teams compete against other colleges and universities on the club level.

More than 5,000 students take part in the University's extensive intramural sports program each year.

Syracuse University is a member of the NCAA, and the Big East Conference.

The Carrier Dome, opened in 1980, is the fifth-largest domed stadium in the country and the only one in the Northeast. It seats 50,000 for football, soccer and lacrosse and 33,000 for basketball.

Manley Field House, remodelled in 1977, seats 9,500 for basketball.

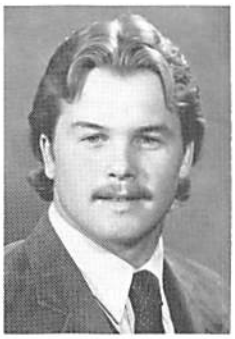

Coyne Stadium, an outdoor field with an artificial surface, seats 5,000 for football, soccer, lacrosse and field hockey.

Drumlins Golf and Tennis Club includes two 18-hole golf courses, a driving range, an outdoor swimming pool, four indoor tennis courts, and two outdoor clay courts.

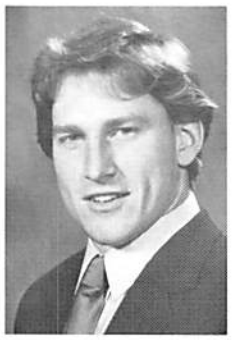

There are nearly 160,000 living alumni of Syracuse University with 60,000 of this number in New York State. There are some 7,000 in New Jersey, 5,500 in Pennsylvania, 5,000 in Massachusetts, 2,500 in Maryland and 1,500 in Illinois.

Cornhusker Wheel Club 1983

Automobile dealers in Nebraska are contributing a large measure of help to the University of Nebraska athletic program through the loan of courtesy cars. Like other programs which are a part of the Cornhusker booster group activities, this project enables the Nebraska Athletic Department to make greater use of its funds. These sports-minded dealers around the state have earned a debt of gratitude from the University of Nebraska Athletic Department. They are an important part of the "team" that includes players, coaches, administration, faculty, staff, students, alumni, Husker Educational Award group, Touchdown Club, Extra Point Club, Beef Club and the courtesy car program.

You don't have time to think.

Because you've got just about a half-second to get it right. Spin the laces. Set the ball. Find the angle. A half-second.

In that brief moment, all you really have to go on is instinct. There's no time to guess. No coach to ask. You have to know.

Knowing when it's right. That's an instinct we understand at Anheuser-Busch. An instinct that goes into brewing a light beer with a clean, distinctive taste. Budweiser® Light.

We know the best never comes easy. That's why there's nothing else like it.

Bring out your best.™

We love to see you go home.

At Methodist, we love to see you go home. When we say goodbye, it means we have done our job and you are on your way to a healthy recovery. Occasionally, it means you have added a new baby to the family. Sometimes, you have journeyed through a debilitating illness or injury and have found strength to rejoin family and friends. We rejoice with you, for your success is our success.

Methodist Hospital, a 559-bed acute care hospital at 84th and Dodge St., offers a full range of health care services from maternity to cancer treatment, from emergency care to physical therapy:

Methodist Midtown, a post acute care facility at 36th and Cuming, provides the total realm of rehabilitation and skilled nursing care needed to recover from the physical disabilities of stroke, joint replacements, fractures and other traumatic injuries.

Midtown also houses chemical dependency services, if you or a family member have problems coping with alcohol or drug abuse.

Whether you are regaining life's momentum with open-heart surgery, overcoming the battle with cancer or recovering from the effects of a stroke, at Methodist we have become your ally, your cheerleader, your friend—and though you'll be remembered we love to see you go home.

The Right Stuff Collection.

Gen. Chuck Yeager (USAF Ret.).
One of America's greatest test pilots, active consultant to the Air Force, NASA and major aircraft manufacturers.

AC-Delco gives you the right gear while your car gets the right parts.

The right battery. The right filters. The right plugs. For just about anything that moves, AC-Delco has the right part.

And now, when you buy any AC-Delco part at the usual price, you can get a terrific deal on "The Right Stuff Collection."

Right out of the pages of World War II. There's never been a collection like it before. And for a very good reason. Test pilot Chuck Yeager — who was a decorated World War II fighter pilot before he broke the sound barrier in the X-1 rocket plane — helped put it all together.

The collection features authentic World War II design, and everything is of high quality. And as an added touch, each item bears our exclusive X-1 emblem — embroidered on the clothing, stenciled on the sunglass case. The X-1 emblem will be a sure sign to everyone that you know what's "the right stuff." And that you also know AC-Delco is the way to go for the right parts.

(A) Pilot's A-2 Leather Jacket. Identical to original in all details. Oil-tanned naked calfskin leathers. Lining: 65/35 polycotton blend. Knit trim of nylon acrylic blend for durability.

(B) Pilot's Coverall. 50/50 cotton polyester. Updated with front zipper and VELCRO® closures on all pockets and waist. Chest pen slot in breast pocket.

(C) Tank Commander's Jacket. Warm, lightweight. Shell: 65/35 polycotton military twill. Lining: melton wool. Brass zipper. Knit trim of nylon acrylic blend for durability.

(D) Flight Vest. Shell: military specification nylon flight satin. Lining: survival orange nylon. Epaulets. Cigarette/pen pocket. Knit trim is nylon acrylic blend for durability.

(E) Aviator Sunglasses. Bausch & Lomb Mirage. Gradient lens. Nonreflective matte finish frames. Case included.

Purchase of any AC-Delco product qualifies you for this offer. Include proof of purchase with order.

THE HEISMAN TROPHY

Presented by the DOWNTOWN ATHLETIC CLUB of New York City to the outstanding college football player selected in a national pool.

The Heisman Memorial Trophy—the top honor in college football—is awarded each year to the outstanding college player in America.

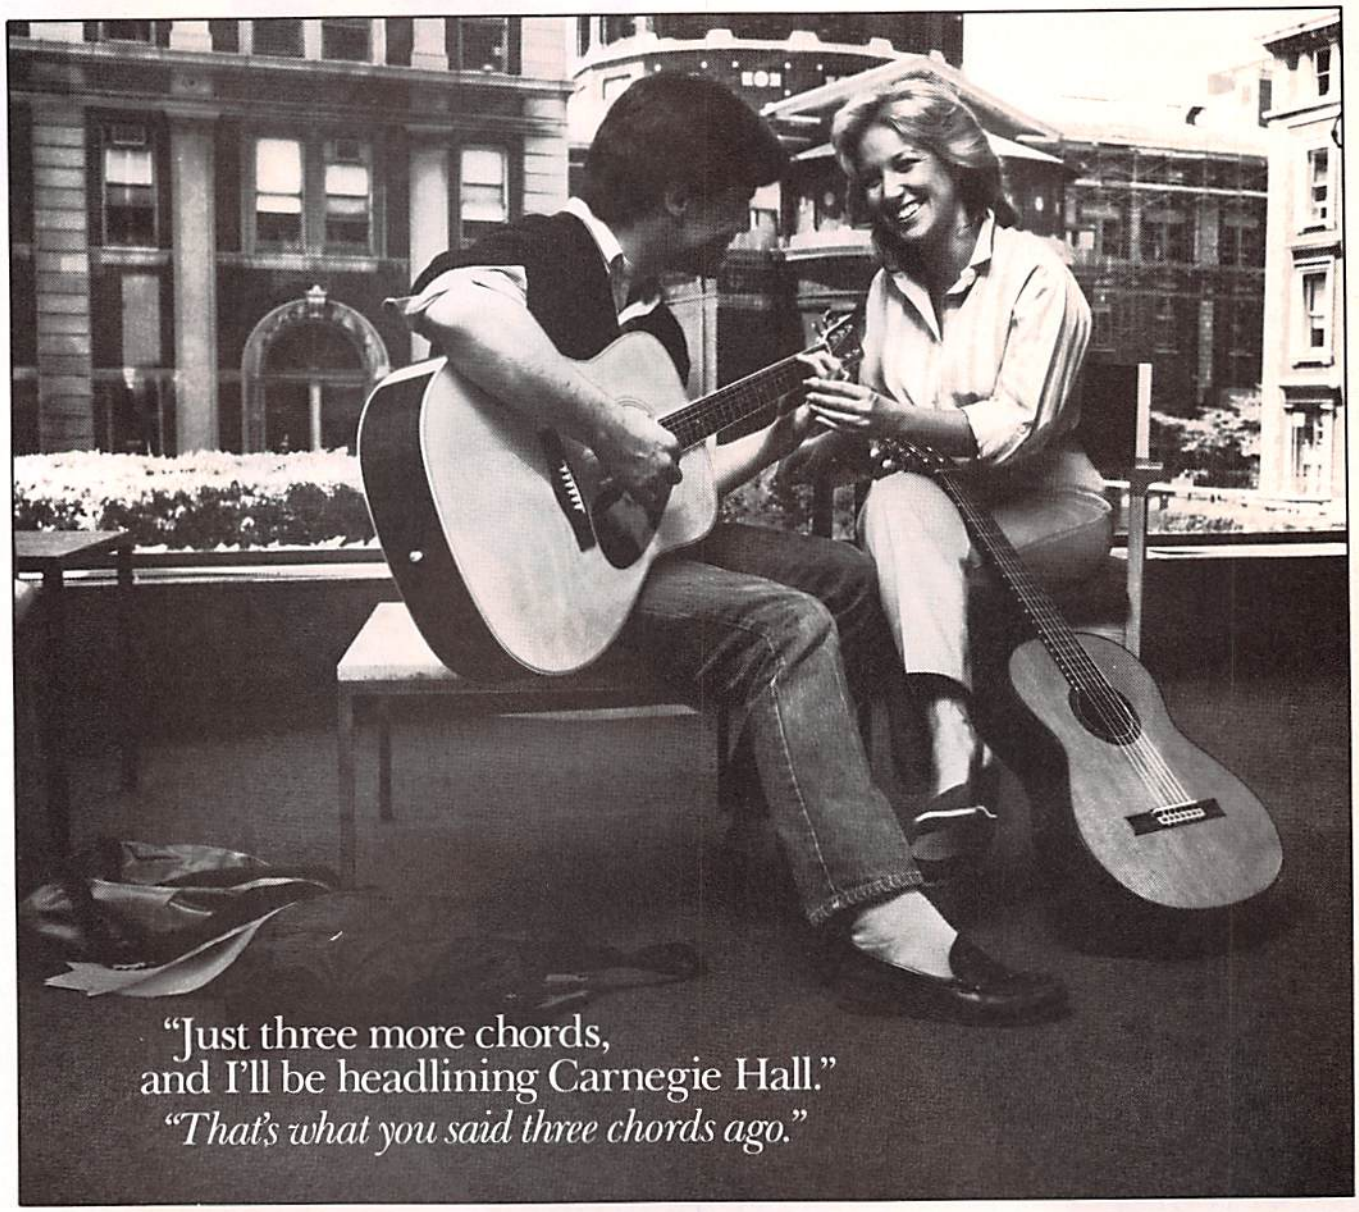

In 1935 John W. Heisman suggested to the Downtown Athletic Club of New York that such an award be created. The new trophy received its current name the following year when Heisman died, in honor of the former college player and coach who had been one of the major forces in the modern development of football.

Heisman played at Brown and Pennsylvania in the late 1890s and early 1900s, then went on to a head coaching career which lasted 36 years. As a coach his innovations changed the way college ball was played. Heisman was also twice president of the American Football Writers Association, one of the organizers and first presidents of the New York Touchdown Club and Director of Athletics at the Downtown Athletic Club of New York.

Today Heisman Trophy winners are chosen through a carefully controlled system. Fifty state representatives from the Downtown Athletic Club of New York recommend players they feel should be considered to the approximately 1,000 sportswriters and broadcasters throughout the country who are eligible to vote. Ballots are mailed after mid-season and are to be returned sometime around season's end with the voter's first, second and third choices indicated. Those choices receive three, two and one points respectively; the points are added up to determine the Heisman winner and the two runners-up. In charge of the process are five sectional representatives from the East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West, all of whom are also sportswriters or broadcasters.

The Heisman Trophy itself is impressive: 14" long, 13½ high, 12½ wide and weighing 25 pounds. Each year it is recast from the original statue, which is displayed at the Downtown Club's headquarters in New York City.

Which Position Requires the Most Athletic Ability

by Ronnie Christ, Harrisburg Patriot-News

Psst! Interested in starting a great debate at next week's tailgate party?

Just ask everybody to answer these simple questions. Which position requires the most athletic ability? Who would be the best athlete on your favorite team?

Sounds easy, doesn't it? But you might be surprised at how many different answers you'll get.

Everybody knows defensive backs are the most skilled athletes on the field. Or are they?

How about those wide receivers? They're the guys who can outrun the wind, leap over tall buildings and juggle a football on their fingertips with all the dexterity of a circus performer.

What about the running backs, the glamour boys of the college game? Surely they must have an abundance of athletic skills.

And how can you overlook the quarterback, who has to use his arm and his mind as well as his feet?

And then there are the linebackers, who must combine many of the athletic skills of defensive backs with the physical strength of defensive linemen. Wouldn't that combination place them at the top of the scale when it comes to athletic ability?

That leaves only the offensive and defensive linemen out of the picture. And if you think those 260-pound Goliaths don't have great athletic ability, you tell them that.

Thus, what appears to have been a rather simple question may not have a simple answer.

Even the college coaches aren't sure.

"Our best group of athletes would be our defensive backs," says the coach of one of the Atlantic Coast Conference teams. "But there have been times when I would have to say the best athlete on our team was our quarterback.

"There are some great quarterbacks who are not great athletes in the true sense of the word. But there are some great quarterbacks who are truly great athletes."

"There's no doubt in my mind that it has to be the quarterback," says an eastern coach who has counted on his QBs to keep his teams among the nation's offensive powers. "He has to be a super, super athlete. Just look for the teams that are the most successful and you'll find a lot of great quarterbacks."

"I think it all depends on the system you use and what you expect from the players at each position," says the defensive coordinator of another team. "In some systems, the linebackers often have to be the best group of athletes.

"There are some other defensive schemes in which the defensive ends must have superior athletic ability. The secondary people always rank at or near the top of the list. If you asked me to name the best athlete on our team, I'd have to say it's our free safety."

One of the many coaches to learn his craft under the old master, the late Paul "Bear" Bryant, considers the strong safety to be the best athlete in the game today.

"The wolfman, or whatever else you call the strong safety, is usually the best athlete on any team," he says. "He's the guy who anchors the defense. He's got to be tough enough to tackle the biggest running backs and fast enough to cover the best receivers."

"I rate the quarterback and tight ends among the best athletes. I've seen some Wishbone quarterbacks who could play almost any position.

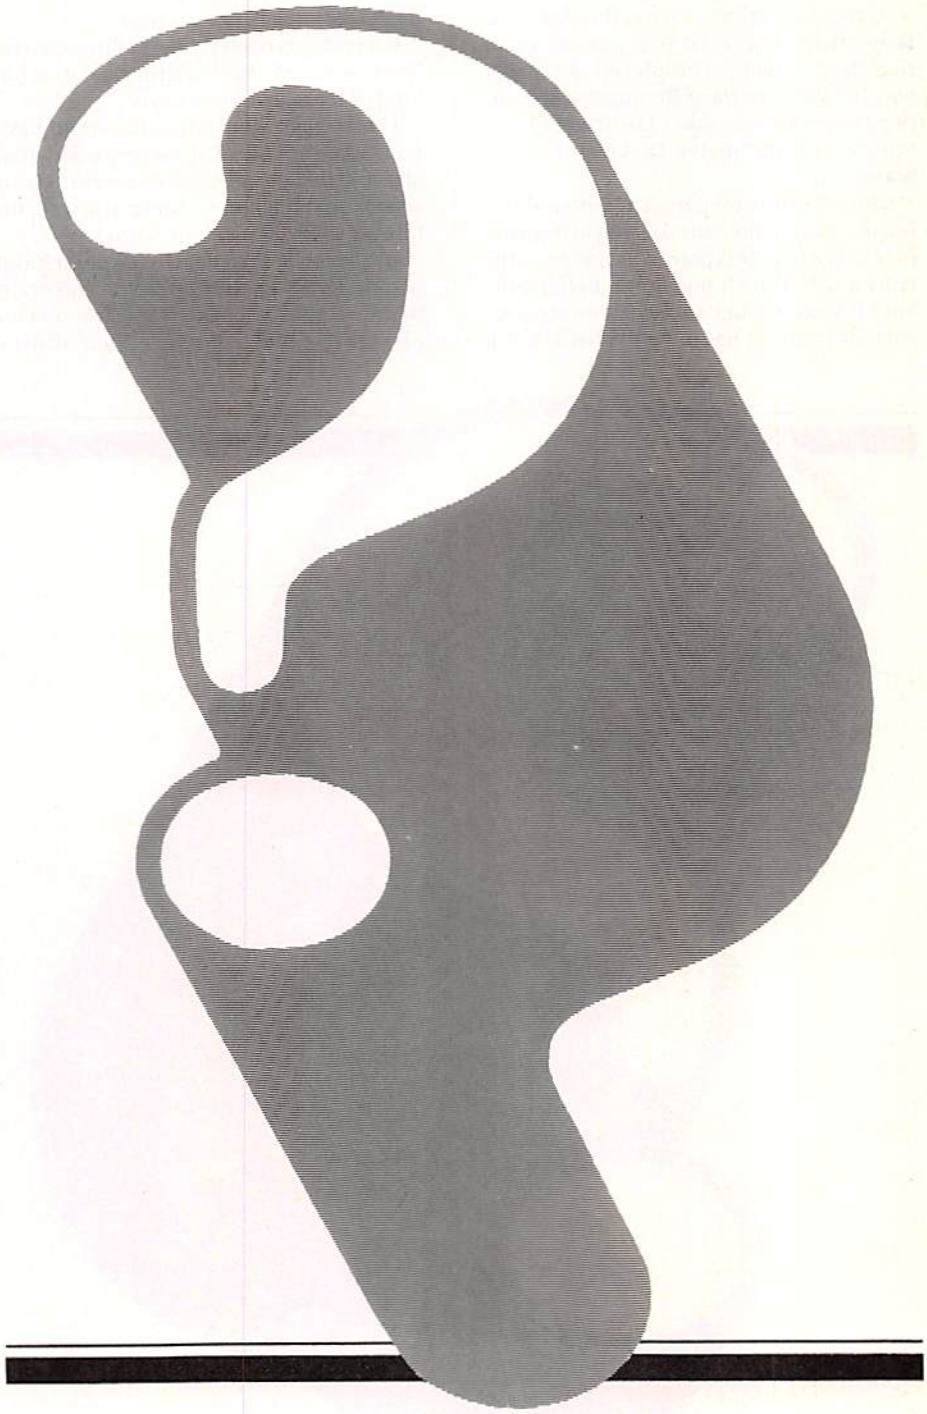

"I think the tight end is often overlooked when you talk about athletic skills. In many of the offensive systems used today, the tight end has to block like a tackle, catch like a wide receiver and run like a running back."

Many coaches rate wide receivers and defensive backs as the players with the most athletic qualities, but one southern coach points out that many linemen have most of those qualities.

And just what are those qualities? What is the magic formula coaches use to measure the degree of greatness in an athlete?

Almost every coach starts with either speed or quickness. They are not one and the same. A player can be extremely quick without being exceptionally fast. Not every great running back is a world class sprinter à la Herschel Walker.

"Speed has to be first because you can't be a great athlete unless you can run," claims one coach, who lists agility and balance as two other key qualities of a great athlete.

Flexibility, size, strength, alertness and mental and physical toughness are other characteristics.

One coach says that a great athlete is one who can play a variety of sports and play them well.

Another feels his best athlete is the kid who can play the most positions. And still another thinks too much emphasis is placed on speed.

Raw speed is certainly a factor, but it isn't the only factor in determining a great athlete.

A lot of other factors go unnoticed, which means that quarterbacks and linemen often don't get proper credit for the skills they possess.

"A great athlete is one who is self-confident," one coach says. "Quarterback is a position which demands that. A great athlete has to have great mental awareness. No position demands that more than quarterback.

continued

"If the great athletes are at the skill positions, then where do you put someone like Hugh Green, who played defensive end for Pitt? Or Dave Rimington, the super center at Nebraska? Or Bruce Clark, who was a defensive tackle for Penn State?

"How do you compare a 170-pound defensive back who runs the 40-yard sprint in 4.4 with a 260-pound lineman who runs a 4.7? Which one is the better athlete? If you consider speed as the most important factor, it has to be the back. But I don't think that's always true."

If a college coach put a "Calling All Athletes" sign on the bulletin board, what kind of team would he have?

There was a time when he would have had a room full of quarterbacks. Just about every coach used to recruit six or seven quarterbacks. Some still recruit four or five with each new crop.

Most high school coaches will pick out two or three of their athletes and train them as quarterbacks. Colleges recruit players like that because of their athletic ability. The players may not have the arm to be great college quarterbacks, but have the athletic skills to play other positions.

The biggest improvement in athletic skills has been made by linemen.

Linemen today are much better athletes than they were five or 10 years ago. Colleges recruit a 6-4, 220-pound tight end who can run, and by the time he comes out of a college weight training program he could be a 270-pound tackle who can still run.

"Not every football player has great natural athletic talent," points out a recruiter. "But what happened to football at every level is that today's players are bigger, stronger and faster than they used to be. There are more people playing the game who possess the skills you associate with a great athlete. You find kids as far down as elementary programs doing things like running drills.

"Now you can't take a guy who runs a five flat 40 and train him to run a 4.5. That's just not possible.

"But what is happening is that all these kids who used to run 5.2 and 5.3 are now running five flat or 4.9. There just aren't any slow players in the game any more."

Despite gains made by players at other positions, defensive backs are generally regarded as the best athletes. They get that distinction because coaches find them able to play basketball and look like basketball players. Or able to pick up a tennis racket and play a decent game without special training. Or grab a set of golf clubs for the first time and not look like a duffer.

"Defensive backs rate so high because so much is demanded of them," says a coach. "They have to go one-on-one with the wide receivers, the other group that has to rate very high as top athletes.

"Defensive backs have to be able to run backwards and from side to side almost as fast as they run forward.

"Defensive backs must have great hand and eye coordination. A defensive back has to be smart.

"Offensive players initiate the action on the field, but defensive players have to react to it. They must have not only the speed to cover the fastest people on the offensive team, but also the acceleration coming out of a break to be in the right place at the right time.

"The only athletic quality that defensive backs may lack is great size."

So, there you have it. While it is by no means unanimous, defensive backs get the nod as the No. 1 group of athletes in college football.

One other thing is apparent.

Great athletes are where you find them. And today you can find great athletes at every position.

THE TAILBACK

GLAMOUR BOY OF THE BACKFIELD

by Pam King,
Los Angeles Herald Examiner

He is the glamour boy of the backfield. He racks up the yardage, hogs the headlines and monopolizes the post-season honors.

If you want to be a football hero, pick up a pigskin and run with it. But don't do it from just anywhere in the backfield—take a few steps back, so that you're deep, deep behind the line of scrimmage. Then you can call yourself a tailback and you just may be ticketed for glory.

Since 1965, the first year a dictionary-definition tailback won a Heisman Trophy, nine others have followed in Mike Garrett's footsteps. Traditional running backs, operating out of Wishbone or Veer formations, won the Heisman only three times during that span.

"I consider myself the prototype," said Garrett, who parlayed his football notoriety into a political career in San Diego, Calif. "When I went to USC, I knew John McKay used an I-formation and I thought it was a peculiar looking offense. But I just wanted to play football, so I didn't care."

When Garrett entered college, a running back usually carried the ball 10 or 12 times a game. Yet his number was called more than twice that much, which set a precedent.

"The fear, at the time, was that a single player couldn't take that kind of beating," Garrett said. "I proved that he could, and from then on, coaches weren't afraid to use their best running back on every play."

Garrett had a unique combination of qualities—specifically speed and determination—that enabled him to establish the tailback position. His most successful successors have those same attributes.

"Any great tailback must have a natural instinct to feel seams in a defense," said a West Coast coach. "But that's assuming he's fast enough and strong enough to take advantage. The great one anticipates those openings and then attacks them with his ability.

"He has to be able to cut back, to adjust on the run. If he runs to daylight, then he's a tailback."

"What we look for," said a Southwestern Conference coach, "is a player who puts out that extra effort, and has the moves and speed to make people miss him."

As one famous eastern coach said, "Sheer speed is not the only answer. The tailback has to have the ability to make the linebacker miss him. He has to have the ability to change directions, to get what I call 'the hidden yards.'

"Sure, there are certain parameters of speed, size and balance. He has to be durable, physically tough. Any time we recruit a guy with a lot of natural athletic ability, we'll give him the ball, just to make sure we're not passing up a natural runner."

But the coaches agreed—and Garrett insisted—that it is an intangible "something extra" that makes a great tailback.

"All too often, we talk about quickness, size and strength," Garrett said. "The reason an individual is successful is because he wants to succeed—at all costs. The trait I see that bonds all the great tailbacks is a strong personality and a will to win. And that, of course, is true of anyone successful in any field."

A tailback has to have a special type of personality. He has to love the challenge of the position. He is the glory guy on the team, and some youngsters handle that better than others.

As one former college tailback said, "The adulation is easy to accept, because that's what every player wants. But it's difficult to handle—unless you really know who you are before all the publicity hits you."

Great tailbacks retain the ability to concentrate, even though they are in the limelight. They feel they are the best—and still want to improve every season. For example, one exemplary tailback, known for his strength, relentlessly continued to lift weights.

A young man's personality is a big factor in his success.

"It's an ingredient you have to work on," a coach said. "It's part of the overall structure of the team."

One important aspect of personality is the tailback's effect on the linemen who block for him. He has a direct influence on the people in front of him. If they can give him blocking, they like to know he can do it on his own. If he's encouraging them, he'll receive better individual blocking. He has to have a great rapport with those people.

A former tailback said he could inspire his linemen by his consistent yardage gains—"leadership by performance," he called it.

"The guys up front like to get it over with in a hurry, so they appreciate a guy who can get the job done. If he appreciates them and lets them know it, you can see the evidence."

A good tailback must have speed, size and balance, plus that intangible "something extra."

The evidence, of course, is statistical. The tailback is glamorous because he handles the ball so much. He gets the ball most of the time, gets the numbers, and gets the glory.

But he also gets the bumps and bruises. As Garrett pointed out, coaches used to think it was more abuse than one body could take.

"A tailback must have the ability to recover quickly and play in pain," said one head coach, who estimates his tailback handles the ball between 30 and 40 times a game. "He has to be able to cope with that punishment. Because he gets the ball more, teams zero in on him."

But for most tailbacks, the glory far outweighs the beating. For one thing, a naturally competitive person wants the ball all the time and doesn't think about the ultimate tackle. "It's like a ballerina," said a former tailback. "She has to get the bunions if she wants to create the beauty."

More and more teams are employing the I-formation. In some cases, they want to take advantage of an exceptional running back in the program—why divide ball-carrying duties between him and another, less accomplished runner in the backfield when he can be in on virtually every play? Other coaches simply believe that the I is a more versatile formation, one that enhances the passing game without detracting from the running game.

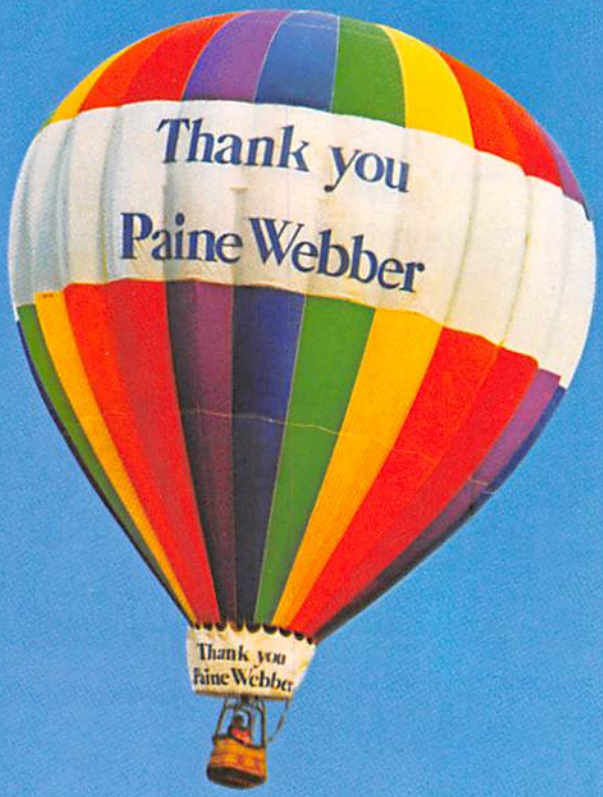

"The Wishbone doesn't capitalize on one outstanding back," said one coach. "The I offers a more balanced running attack, and also is a good passing formation.

"There are more and more good kids playing football, so it's not so hard to find a tailback. Every year, there are 30-40 great running backs, even if only four or five are truly unusual."

College coaches first look for prospective tailbacks among the pool of high school running backs. But the best high school athlete often plays quarterback; he too, can be a candidate for the tailback job. Heisman Trophy winners John Cappelletti and Marcus Allen both were signal-callers before they went to college.

"More and more great high school running backs are demanding an I-formation," said one college coach. "A team that has featured the tailback for several years sometimes has a better chance of recruiting a great high school back."

Obviously the high school stars know what's good for them. If they want their statistics to glimmer, they want to be tailbacks.

The Weather Controls the Game Plan

by Steven Krasner,
Providence Journal-Bulletin

On Sunday, the head football coach gathered his assistants in a little room, trotted out his trusted movie projector, and watched films of his team's performance the day before.

On Monday, he put his team through its paces and talked to his assistant, who had scouted the team's upcoming opponent on Saturday.

On Tuesday and Wednesday, the coaching staff began to formulate its game plan for its next opponent, taking into consideration the other team's strengths and weaknesses as well as his own team's strengths and weaknesses.

On Thursday, his team had a good day of practice, and by the time Friday's practice was over, the coach was confident that he had everything under control for the next day's game. His game plan, he was certain, would produce a smashing victory.

And on Saturday, it rained. The field had turned into a quagmire and the wind was whipping through the stadium like a hurricane. Good-bye game plan.

"Weather conditions can do a real number on your game plan," said the coach of Division 1AA school in the East. "And in some cases, the weather can be a real equalizer, giving the underdog team a real good chance to pull a big upset just because of the conditions on that given day. In the East, I would say that weather conditions are extreme enough to alter your game-plan thinking about 30 percent of the time."

Depending upon what part of the country you are playing in, a coach can expect to run into several different types of interference from Mother Nature. All around the country, rain and wind can be spoilers, but in the West and South, intense heat can become a major factor in the outcome of a game, and snow and intense cold have played havoc with more than one coach in other parts of the country.

And as difficult as it is to play in snow in

FOR CENTURIES, GEESE HAVE KEPT WARM THE SAME OLD WAY.

Feathers, feathers and more feathers. Fine, in their time. But now man has created something better. Thinsulate Thermal Insulation from 3M. A goose would be silly not to give it a try.

WE USE FIBERS, NOT FEATHERS.

Our special microfibers trap more air than most other insulations do. And that's the key to our amazing warmth. You see, the more air an insulator traps the better it works. True. And that means a half inch of Thinsulate Insulation is actually 1.8 times warmer than a half inch of down. Nearly twice as warm. In Thinsulate Insulation, a goose might not mind staying north all winter.

IT'S EASIER TO FLAP YOUR WINGS IN THINSULATE INSULATION.

Because it takes less of our insulation to keep you warm, you get a sleek, lean, racy look. Not bulky. In Thinsulate Insulation, you can lead an active outdoor life. Freedom of movement from wingtip to wingtip.

OUR INSULATION ISN'T AFRAID TO GO NEAR THE WATER.

Should you happen to get it wet, don't worry. Unlike down, Thinsulate Insulation retains almost all of its insulating value under damp conditions. And it can even be machine washed or dry cleaned, depending on the garment's care instructions.

WHAT'S GOOD FOR THE GOOSE IS JUST AS GOOD FOR YOU.

The U.S. Navy Divers, the 1981 British Winter Expedition on Everest, and hard-working ski patrollers and instructors around the world use Thinsulate Insulation. Because it works for them. In fact, they've been shouting its praises, from the highest mountain to the deepest sea. You will, too. When you're out in your element.

Just look for the Thinsulate Insulation hang tag on an assortment of clothing and accessories designed to keep you warmer.

the East and 100 degree temperatures in the South, the athletes can adjust to some extent to the conditions. But when there is a cross-over, that is when a southern school visits the East and has to play in a snowstorm, or when an eastern team shows up for a road game in November in the West and discovers the temperature at game time is 95 degrees, that adds up to trouble for the old game plan.

"Naturally, you try to anticipate the types of conditions you can be faced with," said a major college coach in the East. "And those conditions will force you to make alterations in your game plan.

"For instance, we went out West to play a game, and we knew that the temperature would be high and so would the humidity," he added. "We usually use around 30 people in any given game, but since we knew the temperature was going to be high, we also knew from a stamina standpoint that we'd have to use more than 30 players. I think we used 45-50 people that day, people who would not ordinarily be playing. So, in effect, the temperature, and not necessarily the team we were playing, dictated that we had to go with people we really would have preferred not to use."

Over the course of a season, the weather also can determine a team's offensive style. In the West, when a team can pretty much count on sunny, dry weather, there tends to be more passing. As you move further East, there tends to be more of an emphasis on the running game, though naturally there are exceptions to the rule on each coast.

One reason for a team in the East having to have a solid running game is that in the course of its season, it will most likely get several Saturdays of either rain, snow or severe cold. And passing games are much less effective when the receivers can't even feel their fingers or when the wet pigskin is squirming out of the quarterback's grasp.

"Rain and muddy weather can negate the power of an entire offense," said a man who has coached in the East and the Midwest. "It can turn a football game into a game of chance. In that type of weather, you know each team is going to make some mistakes—fumbles and interceptions. You just have no idea going in which team will make the most."

Natural grass, which is most common in the East, turns into thick mud during a heavy rainstorm, and intense cold weather turns the turf into a playing surface that resembles concrete. But artificial turf, a more common playing surface in the South and West, isn't without its Mother Nature problems, either.

"Of course, you don't have to worry about mud on artificial turf, but rain can make the carpet very slick, causing a problem with footing," said one man with coaching experience on each type of surface.

"But the real problem in the East with artificial turf comes when there's a cold, freezing rain," he added. "I can remember one game where on one side of the field, the shadowy side, the turf was frozen, glazed over with rain. The other half of the field was like a sponge."

Many of the curve balls Mother Nature throws to the football teams put extra pressure on the defense.

It is true to some extent that the offense has an advantage in sloppy weather because the offensive players, particularly the running backs and wide receivers, know where they're supposed to go, so they know when they'll have to plant their foot to make a cut on the bad turf. The defender, meanwhile, has to react to the offensive player's cuts, and very often you'll see a defender sprawled on the muddy turf, watching in desperation and frustration as the offensive player gallops past him for a touchdown.

But as bad as snow, rain and mud are, the biggest nightmare for any coach on the day of a game can be fierce winds.

"A cross-wind can be a real killer," said one coach. "If you've checked out the other team on film and have gotten good scouting reports, and you feel you can exploit that team's defense with a passing game, a cross-wind can throw that part of your game plan right out.

"Wind can change the times you want to throw, the types of throws you can make, and it puts a very big dent in your kicking game," he said. "Naturally, that's when you have to turn to a running game, and you have to make it a field-position game. You have to find some way to keep the other team in its own end. We like to kick the ball down to their goal line when we can in a cross-wind, and force them to try to get out of there, because that's when you force turnovers.

"When you look in the papers on Sunday and look at the scores, and you see some 3-0 and 7-6 games, I'll bet most of those games were so low-scoring because of wind," he added.

And while the very good teams will have very little problem with the very bad teams, no matter what the weather, in games where there is a little less of a clear-cut difference in talent, Mother Nature can play a big part in the outcome. Underdog teams are always looking for a strong cross-wind to help hold the opposition's high-powered passing attack, and heavy rains to help slow down the enemy's solid ground game.

"I can remember one particular season where on back-to-back weekends we were taking a step up in talent level to play a team, and the next week we were playing a team a step down from our level," said an eastern coach.

Rain can abruptly alter the game plan.

"If we were going to get some extreme weather conditions on either weekend, we hoped it would be the first because it would have helped equalize the difference between the two teams," he added. "Well, it was sunny and beautiful on our step-up game, and we lost. The next weekend the weather was miserable, as bad as I've ever seen it, and we were very fortunate to escape that day with a close win in a game that should never have been close."

The key to formulating a sound game plan, therefore, rests on more than just scouting reports. It helps if the Farmer's Almanac happens to be readily available, and football coaches avidly watch the weather spots on the nightly news programs as well as the sports spots, trying to get an inkling of what to expect from the weather for their next game.

But there is one way to avoid the weather-watching madness.

"For a couple of seasons, I coached in a place that had an indoor stadium, a nice roof over it," said one coach, smiling at the memory. "For every home game, the weather was the same, a nice controlled environment. You know, in some ways that was Heaven."

Because the heavens couldn't open up and destroy his game plan.

THE LATERAL

It's Still Winning Football Games

by Al Browning

It was on the first Saturday in November of 1869, the sixth day of the month, that 50 players, 25 from Princeton and 25 from Rutgers, competed in the first college football game.

Rutgers won six goals to four, but only after a professor from Rutgers witnessed the bodies crashing into each other and chastised the combatants: "You men will come to no Christian end!"

There were 100 or so spectators at that game played in New Brunswick, N.J., which is a far cry from the 100,000-plus crowds that annually pack huge stadiums today.

Also, of course, playing rules have changed drastically, along with scoring procedures, and, as everybody knows, the game has taken on a strikingly different appearance. It was a combination of rugby and soccer that delighted fans in the first game, which featured almost continuous motion. Now, the best of those two sports are combined with American-made innovations to produce one of the most exciting games in the world.

Gone are most of the facets of play used by Rutgers and Princeton in their first football game.

But the lateral pass remains, as football fans saw near the end of last season, when California used five such maneuvers to win a game on a midnight-hour kickoff return. Granted, that play was a little wild, but it is interesting to note that the lateral pass, known as the "backwards pass" in NCAA rulebooks, was an offensive ploy in the first college game, and that five lateral passes provided us with perhaps the strangest conclusion to a college football game in modern history.

In fact, when Rutgers and Princeton played the first game, there was no other way for teammates to exchange possession of the football except through the use of a lateral pass. Amazingly, that makes the lateral pass and the fair catch the only two facets of play in the first game that are still used in football today.

"The backwards pass (lateral pass) has been used since they blew up the first football," said Coach Dave Nelson of the University of Delaware, who since 1961 has served as secretary and editor of The NCAA Football Rulebook. "The backwards pass is as old as the game, even older if you consider the start of football to have taken place in 1906, when the forward pass was legalized. That is when the third dimension was added to the game, joining running and kicking.

"It is interesting to note that there were 61 rules written in the first rulebook for football, and the backwards pass was included. It is, in fact, one of only seven original rules still in the book. That first rulebook was written in 1876, when our first rules committee was formed. That tells you know long the backwards pass has been in use."

The lateral pass has had a distinguished history in football. It was at first basic, then ultra-successful, then forgotten, then reborn, and now it is complex; a scientific offensive weapon that takes both skillful ball-handling and timing expertise to work properly.

"I recall reading a story once about how impressed (Coach) Walter Camp was when watching an Australian rugby team play on the West Coast," said Nelson. "That team destroyed an American team by making use of the backwards pass. Coach Camp was impressed by scores like 55-0, so he started thinking about making better use of the backwards pass in football.

"When I played at Michigan in the 1930s, Minnesota was particularly adept when it came to backwards passes. I can recall Minnesota making several on one play, two or three beyond the line of scrimmage.

"Even today, with offensive schemes as complex as they are, I doubt coaches really make good use of backwards passes. A lot can be done in that area."

A lot has already been done. . . .

Difficult to defend: the about-to-be-tackled player keeps the play alive with the lateral.

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post in September of 1926, Coach Amos Alonzo Stagg related action from the Yale-Princeton game in 1876: "Walter Camp, a freshman, got the ball out of the scrummage early in the first half and made a long run. Just as he was tackled, he passed the ball to O.D. Thompson, who continued on for the first touchdown by Yale. Princeton protested that the pass had been forward and therefore illegal. The referee tossed a coin to decide, and Yale won the toss and the touchdown was allowed."

In 1930, Coach Jimmie Knox of Harvard said this about the lateral pass: "The lateral pass as a play has been in football almost from the beginning. But it was in a distinctly haphazard form with the exception of definite plays, which were used as substitutes for old wedge plays at the beginning of the game. One of the early instances in which the play was used was in the Harvard-Yale game in 1894, when Cameron Forbes, who was then head coach of the freshmen, taught the Harvard youngsters a definite lateral. When this play was used against Yale, it gained 57 yards and completely fooled Yale ends and backs, the runner being caught from behind at the Yale 15-yard line . . .

"In 1914, Frank Hinkey came to Yale as coach after seeing a great many Canadian rugby games. He built his attack around lateral passes. He used a formation in which one man stood fairly close behind center and was a definite threat for straight-ahead runs. Another man farther out and farther to the rear could get the ball on a lateral pass, and he in turn was a threat as a runner or as a forward passer. Still farther out and farther to the rear was another back, and his threats were also threefold. . . .

"The start of the 1886 Harvard-Princeton game reads like a rugger match: 'Brooks dribbles and lateral passes to Sears. As the latter is tackled by Cowan, Sears flips the ball sideways to Porter, who makes 20 yards before being thrown by Irvine.' Later, 'Fletcher shoots a long side pass to Burgess, who makes 30 yards.'

"Though Notre Dame outrushed Yale by a wide margin in 1914, the Elis won 28-0 on long gainer plays developing out of flank maneuvers."

Hinkey was so dedicated to an offense heavy in lateral passes that he imported Canadian rugby experts to tutor his backs. The lyric rhythm and flowing continuity they taught worked wonders.

In 1898, Stagg devised a lateral pass in which an end carried the football after receiving it from the quarterback. The end ran across behind his line and tossed the football to one of his halfbacks, who had circled back. Thus, a reverse run was on the books.

In 1894, Stagg had used a lateral pass on a kickoff, the receiver throwing the football to an end or halfback, in baseball fashion.

In 1910, Illinois used a lateral pass downfield after a short pass over the middle of the line.

Coach Andy Kerr of Colgate was a wizard when it came to lateral passes. Said Harvard Coach Lloyd Jordan: "I have never seen a man who could take an idea and develop it to the extent Kerr could."

In 1934, Colgate defeated Tulane 20-6. On a punt, four Colgate players handled the football and gained 40 yards.

What do we have in football now? Actually, much of the same.

The "quick pitch" is still used effectively by teams, provided a speedy running back is in stock, but it has become the most basic of a multitude of lateral passes used today.

The Wishbone offense, with its triple option philosophy, was instrumental in making the lateral pass a viable weapon on a par with the long forward pass and the bomb. And, while it is becoming outdated, it also has the distinction of forcing statisticians to rethink their trade. Quite

This is the Pontiac with more technologically advanced features than any other. And the future of American luxury performance sedans. As the 2.8 liter high output V-6 sparks to life and the graphic instrumentation lights up, you gain a precise driver's sense of control over your environment.

You are truly in touch with your car. And the STE's Driver Information Center is helping to put you there. Important engine functions; lamp operation; door, hood and trunk security—even service reminders—can all be monitored from the driver's seat.

With a simple touch of your finger you can adjust the climate of your driver environment. It's easy with the STE's new climate control center which uses advanced electronics and light-emitting diode locators.

Now notice the seat you're in. It's biomechanically engineered for serious drivers, and conforms to your individual driving position through six areas of adjustment. The STE seat also features thigh and lumbar support, and a concave shape to help keep you comfortable while you take the curves with precision.

When you cut a particularly tight corner, you won't be thinking about the self-leveling Electronic Ride Control. The exclusive "pore-free" cast aluminum wheels. Or the Goodyear Eagle GT high performance radials with analytically tuned shock absorbers, springs, bushings, front and rear stabilizer bars and power rack and pinion steering. Or how these components perform harmoniously as one system. You'll just be amazed at how the responsive Pontiac 6000 STE suspension works as an extension of yourself.

If you're used to traditional luxury sedans, we think you'll find this experience refreshing. And very exciting.

often in the Wishbone, the quarterback will run around end and move upfield with a trailing running back. When a defensive player converges, the quarterback makes a lateral pass to the trailing running back, who moves further upfield. Hence, rushing yardage must be given to two players.

Pity those statisticians who had to determine who ran for what yardage on that five-lateral pass kickoff return last season on the West Coast.

Do you recall the "flea-flicker" pass? That, too, is not in use as much these days as it was in the 1960s and the early 1970s. But it remains a deadly weapon when the proper surprise element is used. On that play, the quarterback makes a forward pass to a receiver, who in turn makes a lateral pass to a teammate running behind him, ala the Illinois play from 1910. The "flea-flicker" pass first earned fame in 1963 on national television. A forward pass was made to the tight end, who in turn made the lateral pass to a running back. After that 18-17 upset, the "flea-flicker" became known in the Deep South as "the Georgia play."

Football is not rugby, only the result of that sport, but the mass of lateral passes used today make it appear similar to that style of the game at times. There are times when lateral passes are even made to husky, surprised linemen, at which time a scrum in forward (slow) motion develops. For the most part, however, zip is associated with lateral passes—the quarterback to a running back, the quarterback to a split end (a pitching and catching variation to the Statue of Liberty play), and the quarterback to a running back, who returns the football to the quarterback, usually by way of a handoff, who passes it forward to a receiver running downfield. Fans go nuts when a play like the latter is a success and absolutely crazy when the pass receiver makes a lateral pass to another teammate trailing him.

How valuable is the lateral pass to an offense? To a man, several coaches say it has both a basic value and a surprise value. Everybody uses a pitchout from time to time, but not everybody uses three pitchouts on one play.

"Lateral passing causes defenses a lot of headaches, not to speak of hours of preparation," said a respected defensive coordinator from a southern school. "If an opposing team is adept at running the option play, well, the headaches are more severe. You can never tell who the next pitch might be going to.

"The lateral pass forces you to use all kinds of defenders against it. Ends obviously have to be concerned with it, as well as linebackers. What a lot of people fail to realize is that defensive halfbacks and safeties must be conscious of it, too. I really hate to face an option quarterback, who can pass on the run. That can drive defensive halfbacks and safeties up a wall, particularly if you try to play man-to-man pass defense. When that happens, a halfback or safety must run with the receiver assigned to him. What happens if the quarterback pitches the ball to a trailing back, instead of passing it?

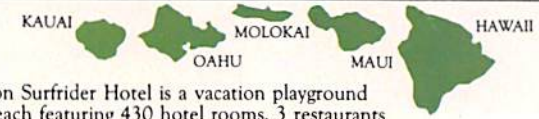

"When you play a team prone to make a lot of lateral passes—an option team—you have to teach the defenders to play a cat-and-mouse game. They have to give the appearance of going in one direction, when they really have intentions of going in another direction. Sometimes, the defense has to fool the offense to keep it from fooling the defense with a lateral pass."

Some folks settle for the end zone.

I'm always a spectator. I mean like right now

Tailgating—Part of the College Football Scene

Tailgate picnics have become as much a part of the college football scene as marching bands and mascots, card stunts and cheerleaders. No longer do folks arrive at the stadium just before kickoff; now many set up picnic tables in the stadium parking lot long before game time and settle down to enjoy tailgating parties with their friends.

Good food and drink—from gourmet meals to casual snacks—are essential to a successful pre-game picnic, so Hormel has come up with the following recipes for your tailgating spread.

BACON STUFFED EGGS 12 Appetizers

Crisp bacon in satiny stuffed eggs—a new look for a delicious duo!

6 hard-cooked eggs
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons bacon bits
2 tablespoons finely-chopped parsley
Dash pepper

Halve eggs lengthwise; scoop out yolks. Thoroughly mash yolks; mix in mayonnaise, bacon, parsley, and pepper. Pile mixture into egg whites; place on serving plate. Cover and refrigerate until chilled. Garnish with a carrot or radish slice, if desired.

TAMALE-CHILI CASSEROLE 6 Servings

Mix, bake, and serve this attractive casserole in the same dish.

1 can (15 ounces) chili with beans
1 can (15 ounces) tamales
3 tablespoons chopped onion
½ cup grated Cheddar cheese

Spread chili in 11x17-inch baking pan. Remove paper from tamales; place tamales on chili. Sprinkle with onion and cheese. Bake in 350°F oven 30 minutes. Cover casserole dish with foil and keep hot, or reheat on barbeque at the stadium.

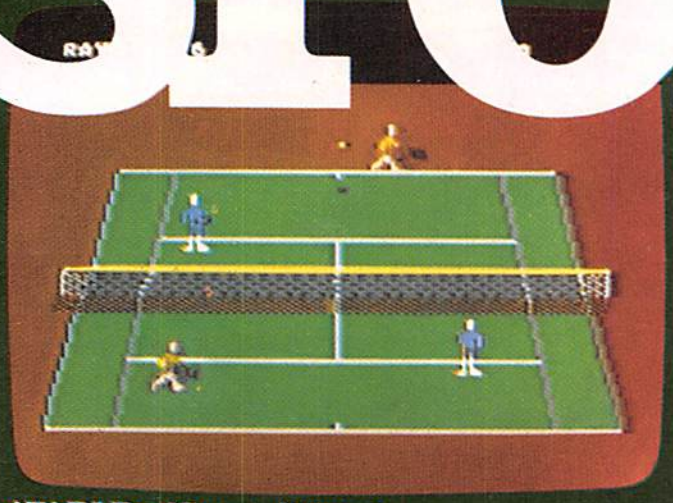

CHICKEN-GRAPE SALAD 4 Servings

The best of everything—chicken, green grapes, and almonds in a glorious creamy salad.

1 can (6¾ ounces) chunk chicken, drained and flaked
1 cup seedless grapes
⅓ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons slivered almonds
¼ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons dairy sour cream
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
Lettuce leaves
1 tomato, cut in wedges

Combine chicken with grapes, celery, green pepper, and almonds. Mix mayonnaise, sour cream, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Just before serving, toss dressing with chicken mixture. Mound chicken salad on lettuce leaves; add tomato wedges.

THE TWO TIGHT END OFFENSE

by Vic Carucci, Buffalo Evening News

In this offense, two running backs and a flanker are used, the second tight end taking the place of the other receiver.

There comes a time when an offense decides enough's enough, when it no longer wants to serve itself on a silver platter to the horde of Pac Men on the other side of the ball. There comes a time when the line of scrimmage doesn't have a strong side or a weak side, when the defense is presented with a formation that evokes more questions than answers.

That's not to say the two tight end offense should be classified as a gimmick. It doesn't really deceive as much as it encourages the defense to be more honest.

With one tight end, an offense can't help but advertise the most likely direction in which it will run. And any coach who wasn't napping during the arrival of college football's high-tech era will have his defensive personnel waiting to make the kill on the strong side. He'll also have an eye toward exploiting the clear path to the ball on the weak side, where a defender essentially is lining up in front of air.

With two tight ends, an offense suddenly becomes balanced. And a defense has no choice but to follow suit.

"When you employ a split end in the traditional pro set, it's almost impossible to run to his side because there's usually no room," one coach explained. "One of the big pluses with two tight ends is that it allows you to run in both directions.

"The two tight end offense gives you, in effect, two strong sides."

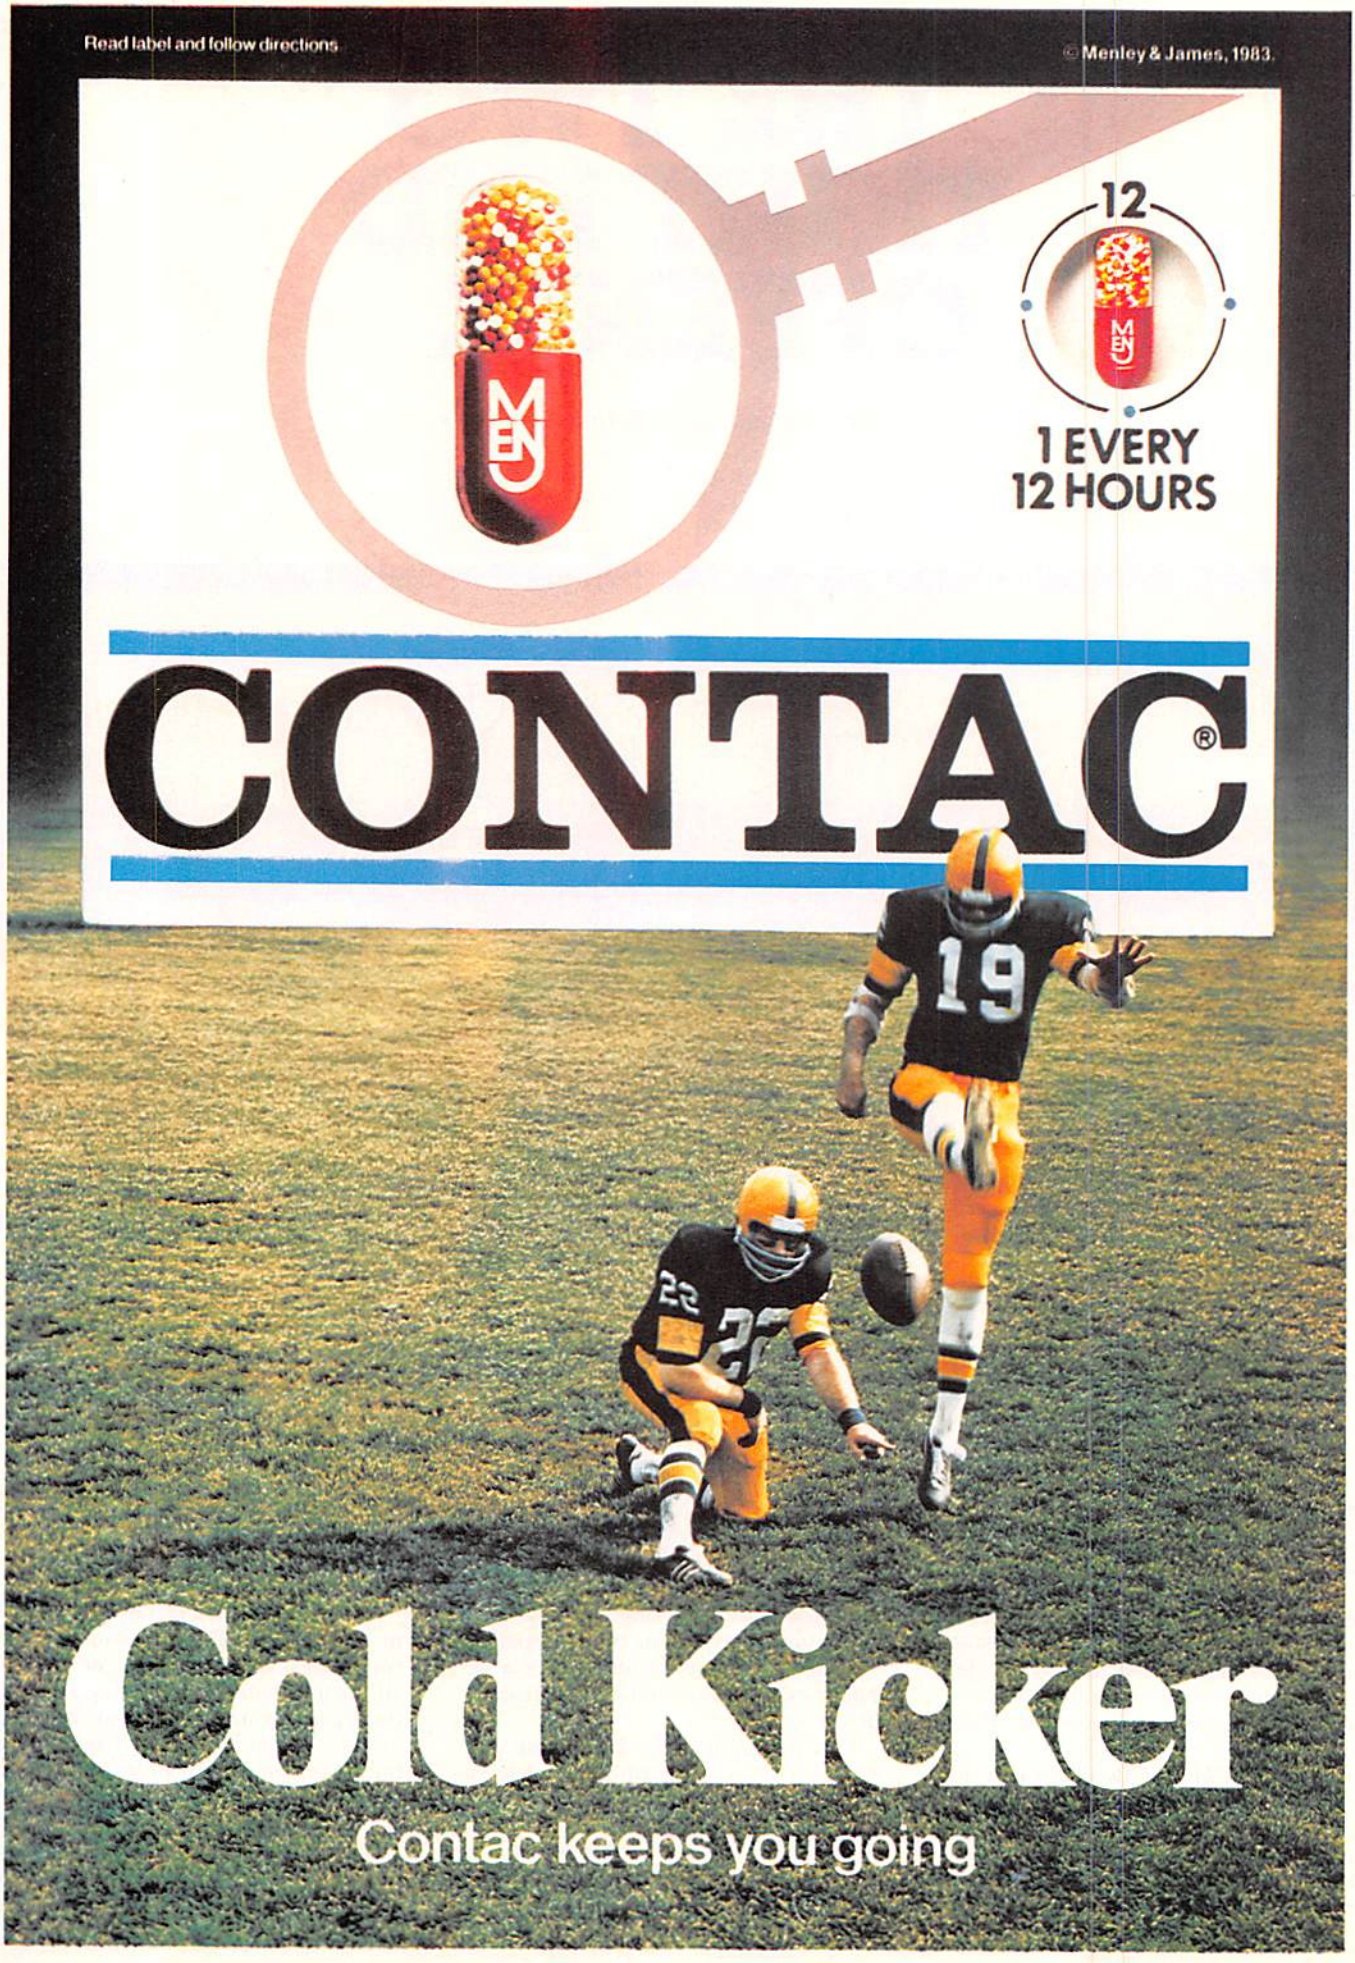

The two tight end offense's popularity in college football has blossomed in recent years. Its greatest attraction is its ability to enhance the running game, but the second tight end can create a wall just as easily as he can create daylight. And both tight ends can be utilized as receivers.

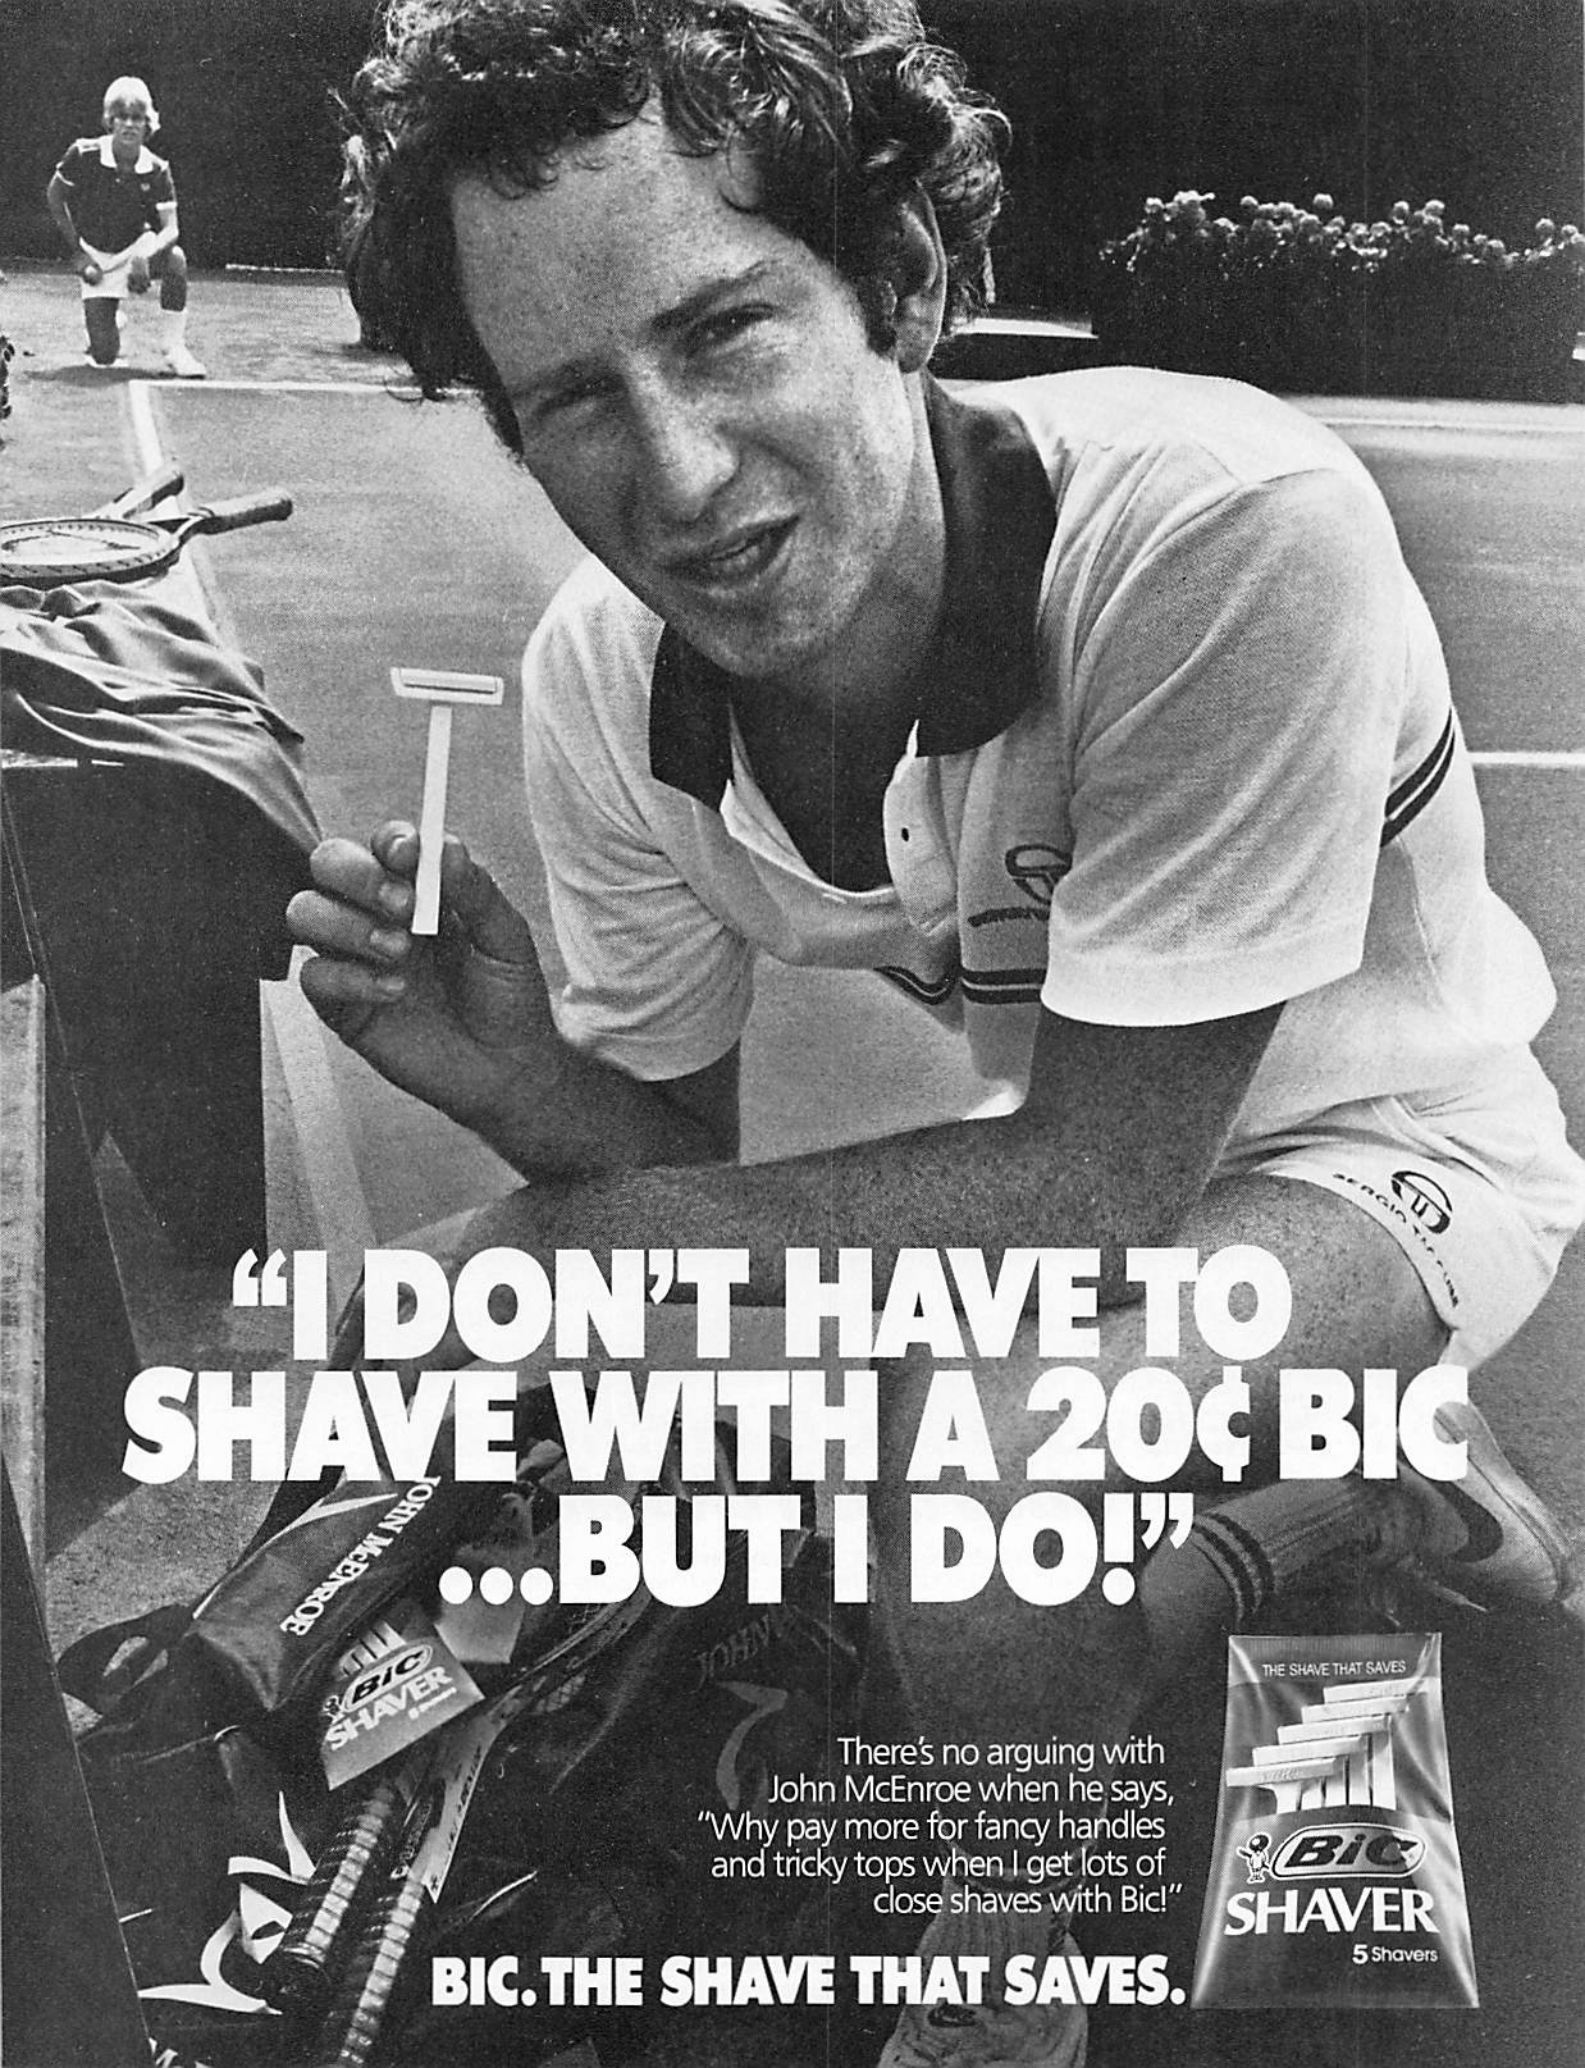

It is small wonder, then, that the formation makes most of its appearances on early downs, when the defense has its attention focused on the run. But how often you see it really depends on who's running the offense.

There are two ways the two tight end offense can be used. One is with two running backs and a flanker (the second tight end taking the place of the other receiver); the other is with one running back and two wide receivers (the second tight end taking the place of the other back).

By keeping the backfield intact, a team maintains its ability to mask its intentions with misdirection plays. On the other hand, it loses a deep threat, so most of its passing is of the ball-control variety—delays, short hooks, short crossing patterns. Not that that makes life any easier for the defense.

With two tight ends and two wide receivers, a team has the ability to attack the entire field with its passing game and the defense is forced into sideline-to-sideline coverage.

"You can take away wide receivers with a double-zone coverage," one coach said. "But it's hard to double-cover backs and it's almost impossible to double-cover two tight ends."

"You can play everybody man-to-man across the board and bring both safeties closer to the line," another coach said. "But when you do that, you're leaving the middle of the field open to the wide receivers."

The most important man in the two tight end offense with one running back is the running back. He must be part jukebox, part cheetah. The offensive load sits on his shoulders, and should it fall off, the formation's punch becomes a half-hearted pinch.

Some coaches believe it is the ease with which contemporary defenses can make wide receivers seem invisible that led to the origin of the two tight end offense. Others feel it is a spinoff of formations in which a running back is positioned near or on the line of scrimmage. Somebody had the brilliance to realize that a tight end—with his blocking and receiving skills—would be more effective in that role.

In any event, the trend has had a major influence on recruiting. Coaches now find themselves searching for two and even three quality tight ends, when, realistically, they know they'll be lucky if they can land just one.

"That's one of the toughest positions to recruit," one coach noted. "An exceptional tight end has to be able to block, run pass routes, catch passes . . . everything. He has to be a very versatile guy, and he just isn't easy to find."

The problem with having only one good tight end in the two tight end offense is that the defense can quickly determine which side of the formation is stronger, thus making it only slightly more effective than an unbalanced line with one tight end.

Of course, there are times when both tight ends are able to give the defense fits without throwing blocks or running pass patterns. They do it by going in motion.

"You can go from a balanced line to an unbalanced line, with both tight ends on the same side," one coach said. "Or you can go from an unbalanced line to a balanced line. Or you can have them start in one direction, then turn around and go back the other way."

That kind of motion may cause a defense or two to scratch its head, and, if any appreciable yardage is gained, curse.

"Everything in defense is specialized these days," one coach said. "You've got the Nickel, the Dime. Depending on the down and distance, you're going to have specialists on the field. And now it looks like the offenses are doing the same thing."

But there is reason to believe coaches throughout the country eventually will devise better ways of handling the two tight end offense, that they'll get it to the point where defenses can be just as dishonest as always. For now, the only known way to combat it is with execution.

"Using two tight ends is like telling the defense, 'My guys are better than your guys, and we're going to prove it,'" one coach explained. "That's what it boils down to.

"Who knows? Maybe it's just a fad that will go out of style."

Hiring college grads is something the Army has always done. And lately, we've been doing a lot more of it.

In fact, last year alone nearly 7,000 college grads chose to begin their future as Army officers.

Why? Some wanted the opportunity to develop valuable leadership and management skills early in their career.

Others were impressed with the amount of responsibility we give our officers starting out. And still more liked the idea of serving their country around the world.

Interested? Then you can start preparing for the job right now, with Army ROTC.

ROTC is a college program that trains you to become an Army officer. By helping you develop your leadership and management ability.

Enrolling can benefit your immediate future, too. Through scholarships and other financial aid.

So the next time you're thinking about job possibilities, think about the one more recent college graduates chose last year than any other.

Homecoming '83: "Just for the Fun of It"

Homecoming '83—"Just for the Fun of It"—will climax the Cornhuskers' next home football game vs. the Colorado Buffalos.

The celebration, which begins Sunday, Oct. 16 and runs through Saturday evening, Oct. 22, has been planned since April by the All-University Homecoming Committee, a group comprised of many different campus interests, from spirit clubs and the marching band to fraternities, residence halls and other organizations.

This year's chairperson of the All-University Homecoming Committee is Sandy Massey. Connie Eberspacher is co-chairperson.

Sara Boatman, director of campus activities and programs and an advisor to the committee, said that "since the emergence of the All-University Homecoming Committee in 1980, the quality of the Homecoming celebration has been remarkable."

"This year's committee has done an outstanding job and has come up with some great programs that should be fun for everyone."

A goal of the Homecoming Committee has been to bring student participation to an all-time high while keeping the traditions of Homecomings past. Homecoming has for more than six decades been an important tradition at UNL. During the 1920's, for instance, pledge drives were held in connection with the Homecoming celebration to help build Memorial Stadium.

The Depression didn't put a damper on student spirit, and it was in the decade of the 30's that UNL students first recognized a queen, known as the Farmer's Formal Queen, to rule over Homecoming festivities. The prestigious title became Pep Queen in the 1940s. In the mid 70's, UNL students first began electing a male student as well as a female student to serve as Homecoming Royalty.

In the '50's, Homecoming was an activity of major importance to nearly all UNL students, with pep rallies, a parade, an all-university Homecoming Dance and displays and decorations at Greek Houses.

Although the celebration suffered a decline in popularity in the late 60's and through much of the 70's, it is once again a major event of the UNL school year. Last year's celebration, which included a concert by Diana Ross, a swing dance, sports trivia contest and a talent show, was a tremendous success.

Chairperson Massey said the All-University Homecoming Committee has pledged itself to providing a Homecoming '83 that will be as good, if not better than last year's.

"This year," said Massey, "we will bring back things that went over well last year and try some new things."

Among the new events will be an all-university street dance, a successful event held in previous years but not in 1982. Other new events will be a movie outdoors—Rocky III—which will be shown on both City and East Campuses.

Subcommittee chairpersons for the Homecoming Committee are Greg Ibach, publicity; Cindy Porter, events coordination; Kay Hinn, parade organizer, and Carol Pribyl, homecoming royalty committee.

1982 Homecoming Royalty: Brenda Heyden and Frank "Chip" Winter.

The Tri-Delta sorority's Washboard Band, a crowd pleaser at last year's Homecoming, will once again entertain on the plaza north of the Nebraska Union before the Cornhuskers meet Colorado on Saturday, Oct. 22.

Valentino's®

TWO NEBRASKA LEGENDS

Nebraska can boast of two legends:
Big Red and Valentino's

Year after year, the cornhuskers prove their superiority on the football field.

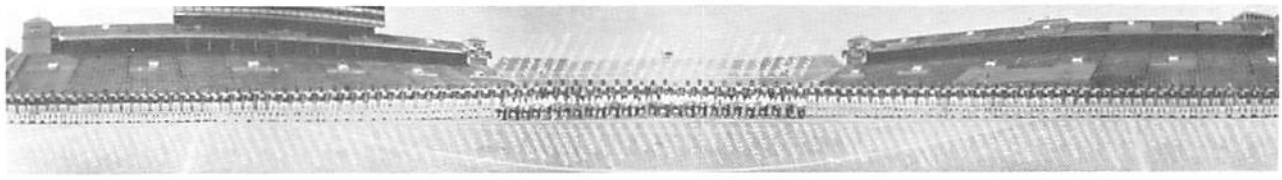

And year after year, fans enjoy Valentino's famous pizza, pasta and salads. After the excitement of Big Red in action, enjoy another legend.

Chevrolet's M.V.P.

We're proud of our newest Most Valuable Performer–the new Corvette. The sporting analysts of the automotive world, the enthusiast magazines, are pretty impressed with it, too. Car and Driver magazine called it, "The most advanced production car on the planet."

That makes us feel pretty good at Chevrolet. Because a lot of deep thinking and hard work went into creating the new Corvette.

The dedication that went into Corvette is the same dedication demonstrated by the athletes of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. And since we know what hard work is all about, we established the Chevrolet Scholarship Program back in 1971. This awards the Most Valuable Players in NCAA football and basketball games with a donation to their respective school's general scholarship fund.

To date, over 1,800 scholarships, totaling over 1.9 million dollars, have been donated to assist men and women in furthering their educations.

At Chevrolet, we strive for excellence. That's why we support the goals of the NCAA and that's why we offer cars like our Most Valuable Performer–the new Corvette.

GM
MARK OF EXCELLENCE

Let's get it together. . . buckle up.
